The Old Catskills.
If We Really Thought.
Dynamite and Hailstones.
Free Your Emotions.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THIS IS WRITTEN in the Catskill Mountains, where Rip Van Winkle had his long sleep and where, some day, many millions will find a glorious summer playground. Here are 1000 natural landing fields, on the ends of sloping mountains, 40 minutes' flight from the ten million people that live in and around New York city.

Groups of little mountains, 2000 to 3500 feet high, beautifully green, and waiting for millions that will come.

The 1,250,000 children and 36,000 teachers, just released from New York city's public schools, ought to be here, and real civilization will find a way to send them, instead of leaving them in hot New York. There could be no better place for old men and women to spend their last years, looking east toward the troubled Atlantic and worrying Europe, and west, across broad America, toward the Pacific and mysterious, uncertain Asia, they, themselves, at peace, in this happiest of nations.

If men were really thinkers, their minds would be fixed on the immensity of the universe, the smallness of this little green globe, the certainty of death, and the uncertainty of what lies beyond. But, we are little inhabitants of a small planet and little things interest us.

Lightning struck a boat carrying dynamite off Cockburn Island, in the St. Lawrence, killing 30, blowing the big $100,000 boat to splinters. We like to read about that.

At St. John's, N. F., windows, roofs, were broken, animals killed by hailstones weighing 10 pounds each. We've heard of hailstones as big as hen's eggs, but not as big as hens. That interests 1,000,000 of us where Einstein interests one.

The learned Dr. W. J. Mayo, earth's greatest surgeon, able to remove anything you have, except your citizenship and your complexes, warns you that restraining your emotions is bad for your heart. Every time your mind interferes to check your instinctive impulses, the heart suffers. That will encourage modern young people, increasing their expectation of long life.

When you suddenly jam on your four wheel brakes, your tires suffer. So with your heart, when you suddenly apply your will and control the emotions, which are your driving force.

"Pre-cut meats," beef, mutton, pork carcasses, cut, ready for consumers' use in the packing house, not in local butcher shops, interest retailers of food.

Swift & Co. are experimenting with the new idea, introduced by Mr. Chester, president of the General Food Co., in connection with sudden freezing, in transparent packages, at extremely low temperatures. Meats thus pre-cut and frozen are said to last indefinitely, losing none of their quality. This means much to retail stores that have found it undesirable or impossible to deal in fresh meat and fish hitherto.

It also means a new era for the retail butcher. Expert cutters, or cutting machines in packing houses, will do the minute butchering that has been done by thousands of individual butchers. Farmers might combine to cut and freeze their cattle, eliminating the big packer and long haul on the hoof.

Many high spirited Americans have lost their taste for stock gambling. On Wednesday, call money used for speculating, fell to one and a half per cent, lowest price in 17 years. When we tire of gambling, call money is cheap. Last summer call money went to 20 per cent.

The banker can sympathize with the farmer. Wheat and money both are drugs on the market.

Capt. Saul, of the Southern Cross, can testify to man's progress in transportation. As navigator of the Southern Cross he flew the Atlantic in two days.

Some years ago he made his first Atlantic crossing in a square rigged sailing vessel, and was six months on the journey.

In spite of that many still doubt that ocean air travel will ever "become practical."

Children of today will ask about "the old days, when people crossed the ocean on the water," as they now ask about stage coach days.

And those now living will cross to Europe for about $10.

YANCEY HOPS FOR MOSCOW ON JULY 4

By HARRY A. BENWELL

Old Orchard, Me., June 28—Capt. Lewis A. Yancey, one of the heroes of the Pathfinder's flight to Rome, is planning to start from here July 4 on an attempted non-stop flight to Moscow, it was learned today.

Weeks of conjecture concerning the identity of a mysterious aviator reported to be arranging another oversea air journey from the beach here, crystallized close on the heels of the arrival of the Southern Cross in America.

The Boston Evening American has learned that Capt. Yancey hopes to celebrate the Fourth by starting on one of the most ambitious trans-Atlantic flights yet undertaken.

If the start is made on the holiday it will be almost the anniversary of the takeoff of the Pathfinder on the epic journey of 4800 miles to the capital of Italy.

PARTNER OF WILLIAMS

Capt. Yancey, one of the best known navigators in aviation, was the partner of Pilot Roger Q. Williams on the Pathfinder and on its predecessor, the ill-fated Green Flash.

He has just returned from a six weeks' good-will air tour of South America, in which he was accompanied by Emil Burgin, pilot, and Zeh Bouck, radio operator.

The utmost secrecy has been observed in relation to his plans for the projected Moscow flight, but from time to time rumors have been heard of a "mystery" ship which was reported as being groomed for a transatlantic journey.

DETAILS SECRET

Details as to the type of ship to be used and the personnel of the crew, other than Capt. Yancey, have not been obtained.

It is understood, however, Yancey will have a Bellanca monoplane similar to the Pathfinder, and large enough to carry the unusually heavy load of gasoline necessary for such a flight.

This plane is believed to have been secretly purchased, and reconditioned in New York.

Within the next few days it is expected it will be flown to Scarborough Airport for a final overhauling.

Although Capt. R. D. Coath, in charge of the airport, and Richard Hoyt, traffic and sales manager, are uncommunicative, it is understood the field will receive the ship shortly.

As Capt. Coath pointed out in inviting the Southern Cross to the airport, it is equipped with gas pits, lights and other facilities for refuelling or making repairs.

Four Towns Battle Blaze in Stoneham

A general alarm fire for which help from Wakefield, Reading and Woburn was called early today, destroyed a 5½-story wooden factory known as the Old Tannery, in Maple st., Stoneham.

The fire then spread to a dwelling where five families were forced to flee, and threatened the gasoline tanks of the Standard Oil Company nearby. The origin of the fire was suspicious, police said.

The fire was first seen by a passerby.

The flames were shooting from all sides of the building when firemen arrived. The wind carried embers far and wide and help was called from out of town when it appeared that many other buildings would be ignited.

Scores of Maple st. residents fled to the street when burning embers dropped on the roofs of these homes.

The factory was unoccupied, the tenants having moved out about six months ago. An investigation was started by police. The flames shot so high that they attracted thousands to the scene. The American Glue Co. plant, nearby, was threatened for a time, but a blanket of water was spread about it.

The natives are now at the bottom, but if they win today, they will pass their Windy City rivals. They are determined to do that little thing and the enemy is equally determined to drop no lower, so there should be quite a lot of excitement in Bob Quinn's orchard.

Danny MacFayden, who has allowed but three hits in each of his last two starts, will hurl for the Sox, while Garland Braxton is due to toss for the hostiles.

BOY HOUDINI IS WELL GUARDED

Victor Stanwhite, 17, known as the "Boy Houdini," was arraigned in Brookline court today charged with breaking and entering in the night time the home of William Cordingly, 1083 Boylston st., where he was arrested.

The boy who smiled throughout the proceedings, pleaded not guilty and was held in $2000 for appearance in Superior Court.

During arraignment in the open dock, Officer Joseph Priestly stood guard over Stanwhite, whose escape from City Prison Sunday amazed officials, and he was later taken to Dedham jail.

Before arraignment the boy was questioned by Boston inspectors regarding his escape, but gave them little information.

LAUGHS AT CITY COPS

"Yeah, the big city dicks," he said. "I could wander around Boston all I wanted, but came out here in the country and got caught."

Suddenly he interrupted the questioning to remark confidentially:

"Between you and me, I'm the guy who shot the fellow with whiskers."

BOSTON LINER HITS OBJECT OFF MAINE COAST

Cutters Rush to Aid of Gov. Dingley; Captains Says There Is No Peril

Carrying 300 passengers from Boston and a crew of 100, the S. S. Governor Dingley, bound for St. John, N. B., struck a submerged object off Machias, Me., early today, and was crippled.

She anchored and immediately wirelessed for aid, two coast guard cutters and a tug starting to the scene.

Collision with the submerged object, possibly a log, stripped the propeller of the boat so that she was able to make no way. The mishap occurred at a point five miles west of Moose Peak ledge.

TO TOW TO EASTPORT

No danger existed for either ship or her passengers, according to messages sent the ship's offices by Capt. J. V. Ingalls.

The coast guard started the cutter, Kickapoo, to the scene from Rockland, Me., and the cutter Ossipee from Portland. A towing tug was dispatched from St. John, none large enough being available at either Machias or Eastport.

Line officials said the Governor Dingley would be towed into Eastport where passengers and freight would be transferred to another ship for transportation to Lubec and St. John.

The Governor Dingley sailed from Boston at 10 a. m. yesterday with a near capacity passenger list of summer vacationists and excursionists, mostly Greater Boston residents.

She encountered the submerged object between 1 and 2 a. m. today. The impact of collision was slight and few passengers aboard the ship realized anything untoward had occurred, line officials said.

NO NEED FOR SOS.

Capt. J. V. Ingalls ordered the call for aid, which was not an SOS, but a direct communication with the line offices and the coast guard stating what had occurred, the ship's position and the need of assistance.

Capt. Ingall's message follows:

"Struck submerged wreckage, lost wheel. Anchored five miles

Bandits Make Big Whoopee in Holdup

Chicago, June 28 (AP)—Six bandits made merry for an hour early today at the expense of their victims for food and entertainment at the Cottage Inn, a roadhouse. The gunmen severed phone wires, posted a lookout, and, firing a warning into the ceiling, lined up 10 customers and the personnel of the place against a wall, took all their money and jewelry and then forced them to lie on the floor. Then they ordered food and drink and music.

4 Women Injured in South Boston Crash

Four women were injured today when a sedan crashed into a taxi in West Broadway, South Boston. The injured, taken to Carney Hospital, were:

Louise Dowies, 37, married, of C st., South Boston; contusions of the right shoulder and arms.

Felice Fentry, 43, single, of West Fifth st., South Boston; contusions and abrasions of the head and face.

According to police, the sedan was operated by Thomas F. Kennet, of 127 Conant st., Roxbury. The taxi was operated by Manuel B. Maderios. The latter had stopped to let passengers off. Both women passengers in the taxi were thrown to the street. The two cars, badly damaged, were towed to a South Boston garage for repairs.

Coast guard headquarters here said it was understood the vessel was in no danger except that it was in "an isolated position."

Several hours after leaving for the scene, the cutters had not reported to the Boston base.

Later Capt. Ingalls sent another message:

"Kickapoo due alongside 11:30 a. m. (E S T). Ossipee 4 p. m. Moderate southwest winds, small swell; clear. Everything O. K. Rudder intact as far as can see. Wheel gone. Taking no water. No damage; if any (correct) to hull. Recommend dock St. John. Ship wheel by Austin.

His mining interests included copper in Montana, diamonds in Africa and sulphur in Texas. He was a director of the Federal Reserve bank of New York from its organization in 1914 until 1919. A graduate of Phillips Exeter in 1890 he had given the academy more than $2,000,000.

Polecat in a Bag the Prize Grabbed by Dorchester Man

This started as the tale of a lunch and ended as the tail of a polecat.

William Ericson of 67 Bearse ave., Dorchester, lay down to rest in the grass on Telegraph Hill, Marshfield. He placed a large paper bag containing his lunch beside him. He fell asleep.

It was dark when he awakened. He groped for his lunch, felt the paper bag, grasped the top and held a large wood pussy by the tail. The polecat, head in the bag, was licking its chops over the last of the meal.

William dropped the bag (and how!) and the polecat withdrew leisurely, without seeking revenge for having been disturbed.

NAB BOY HOUDINI IN BROOKLINE

"What fellow with whiskers?" he was asked.

"Santa Claus, of course," the boy replied.

He submitted to arrest easily, after having been found in bed in the palatial Cordingley house, which is closed for the summer.

Because other house-breakers have been captured in the same dwelling in the past, Patrolman Lawrence Grennan, night route officer, examines doors and windows carefully.

FOUND HIM IN BED

On his first visit at 7:30 p. m. Grennan said he found everything in proper condition. However, at 11:40 a pantry window was open and he immediately called the police station. Other officers were rushed to the house, surrounding it, while Grennan entered. In a room on the second floor he found the boy in bed, partly clothed.

He told police that following his escape from City Prison, where he was held for the shooting of Louis Beck, a South End pawnbroker, he passed through a vacant house in Somerset st.

Boston inspectors were anxious to learn what disposition Stanwhite made of the keys he took from his sleeping guard when he made his getaway.

FIND KEYS IN JAIL

Inspector Stephen J. Flaherty eventually induced Chief Rutherford to permit the boy to be taken to Boston by officers, and a visit was made to Somerset st., near the City Prison.

Stanwhite showed the officers where he climbed a gate into an areaway leading to Howard st., entered a lodging house at No. 48 and went to the cellar where he slept in a coal bin.

The missing keys were found where he said he had thrown them, behind a trunk in the cellar.

As a result Inspector Flaherty was complimented by Deputy Supt. James McDevitt.

MOB IS URGED TO STORM JAIL BY WOMEN

Tear Gas Bombs Disperse 100 After Negro Attacker at Beaumont, Tex.

Beaumont, Tex., June 28 (AP)—A mob which included several women early today failed in an attempt to storm the Jefferson county jail and seize Rainey Williams, 39, negro who has confessed eight attacks on Port Arthur white women in the past 30 days.

Williams was brought to Beaumont from Port Arthur after an attempt to lynch him yesterday had been thwarted.

Ariving at Port Arthur in autos at 1 a. m. today, leaders of the mob, 100 strong, grappled with the sheriff outside the building.

Deputies in windows warned them they would fire and the men retreated.

Tear gas bombs stopped a second attempt to enter the jail. A heavy stream of water was poured on the attackers, but firemen were quickly overpowered.

The women in the crowd for the most part remained in automobiles and shouted encouragement to the men.

"Go in there, men," one girl shouted. "Go on in the jail. Where are your guns?"

No. Carolina Mob Disperses as the Troops Reach Jail

Concord, N. C., June 28 (AP)—A company of the North Carolina National Guard, called out by Governor Max Gardner to prevent possible mob violence to seven Negroes held in jail here in connection with a criminal attack on a 15-year-old white girl, found the potential mob dispersed as it took up its post today.

The attack was made on Ruth Criswell at her home in the Roberta mill community, eight miles from here, early Friday morning. The girl required surgical attention.

Eleven Negroes were arrested by posses with bloodhounds. Deputies said early today they did not believe they had "the right Negro."

The crowd last night confined itself to shouting and to breaking windows in the jail with stones.

Sings Praises

A TRIBUTE IN POETRY was penned for Rear Admiral Byrd on his homecoming by Arthur Cantor, Mattapan's 11-year-old poet.

YOUTHFUL POET LAUDS BYRD

Arthur Cantor, 11, Mattapan's boy poet, expressed the sentiment of thousands of Boston school boys when he penned the following poem of greeting to Admiral Byrd on his homecoming:

BYRD

By Arthur Cantor

He sailed the wide, wide ocean
He heard the glaciers roll
He saw the science and beauty
And mystery of the South Pole.

He had the power of knowledge
He opened the Antarctic gates
He proudly and fondly displayed
The flag of the United States.

He did it, he did it
The greatest trip ever heard
Abandon your fears, give three cheers
For Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd!

AIR ENDURANCE PAIR NEAR GOAL

Chicago, June 28—At 11:40 a. m., Eastern daylight time, today, the refueling endurance plane City of Chicago had been aloft 404 hours in its attempt to break the world's record of 420 hours 21 minutes and 30 seconds.

If all continues well aboard the plane, the record will be equalled at 6:01:21, Eastern daylight time, tomorrow morning by John and Kenneth Hunter, brother pilots.

Walter Hunter, who with his brother make up the contact crew, said the Wright Whirlwind motor "sounds good for another 700 hours." At that time the 149th refueling contact had just been successfully made, with Will Rogers, the humorist, going aloft in the contact plane Big Ben to cheer the fliers.

HOOVER FIGHTS CURB ON DRY PROBERS

President Pledges Private Funds to Wickersham Commission

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
Universal Service

Washington, June 28—President Hoover yesterday defied the Senate to restrict the scope of the national law enforcement commission to a dry law inquiry by limiting its appropriation, and belligerantly announced that he would obtain private funds so that it can continue its work.

This action came immediately on the heels of Senate action cutting the requested appropriation from $250,000 to $50,000 and directing the commission to attend strictly to the business of investigating prohibition law violations.

HOOVER'S VIEWS

The President declared:

1. The enforcement of any one criminal law involves the machinery of all law enforcement.
2. There is an alarming increase in the number of federal prisoners and that only 30 per cent are convicted for prohibition violations.
3. That the country is interested in the enforcement of all laws and that citizens are sufficiently interested in enforcing all laws to contribute funds to continue the inquiry. He pledged $100,000 from this source.

Immediately after the Senate slashed the commission's appropriation to $50,000 the President called in the members of the law enforcement commission in the city. These were Chairman Wickersham, Miss Ada L. Comstock, Henry W. Anderson, Monte M. Lemann and Roscoe Pound. It was here that the preliminary funds were arranged for.

FOR BOULDER DAM

Later Chairman Wickersham said:

"I have nothing to say except that we never quit."

The Senate action was taken by a vote of 35 to 30, upsetting a previous vote of 30 to 29 to give the commission $250,000 for another year in which to complete its inquiry into law enforcement generally.

Then the Senate, without a roll call, passed the deficiency bill, carrying $70,000,000, including $10,665,000 to start work on Boulder Dam.

VICTORY SEEN FOR PENSION

Washington, June 28—With the support of the American Legion, administration leaders today were hopeful the Senate would adopt the World War veterans' pension bill passed by the House.

After a full day of taking testimony yesterday, the finance committee is expected to report the bill today. The Senate will probably vote Monday.

The Democrats intend to offer an amendment raising the maximum pension from $40 to $60 per month, the limit in the Spanish War veterans' pension bill.

The fact that the American Legion endorsed the House bill, however, raised administration hopes of beating off the Democratic attacks.

The Legion's position was outlined in a letter written by National Commander C. L. Bodenhamer, read to the finance committee by John Thomas Taylor, legislative representative. It said:

"I request that you speak for me and assure them of our appreciation of their interest in this disabled veterans' legislation and urge them to report out immediately the bill with amendments suggested above and thus making possible the speedy enactment of this legislation into law."

The amendments suggested by Bodenhamer are for an extension of time in which to bring suit on insurance claims and to have Comptroller General McCarl removed from passing judgment on veterans' allotments.

"You must remember that the bill was made with no hostile intentions toward any country. The idea of the Americans was that it was in their best interest, and after all each country works for what it considers its best interest," Boyden said.

MUNICIPAL BANQUET PUTS CLIMAX TO BOSTON'S WELCOME OF BYRD

CITY, STATE IN TRIBUTE TO HERO

Explorer Leaves for New York After Greatest Celebration in Hub's History

Rear-Admiral Richard E. Byrd slipped out of town early today bound for New York after one of the most enthusiastic receptions ever accorded an individual in Boston.

When the plaudits of the massed thousands that lined the downtown section during the street parade and Common exercises scarcely had died away, Boston's own explorer was given another tremendous ovation at the municipal banquet last night at the Copley Plaza.

Four hundred persons, representing every walk of life—army, navy, State, city and the professions—gave burst after burst of cheering as the admiral, escorted by Mayor Curley, took his place at the head of the banquet table.

TRIBUTE TO HERO

Thereafter the hotel resounded with tribute to the band of heroes led by the indomitable Byrd who have left an indelible mark in the history of polar exploration.

Behind the speakers' table hung a rear admiral's flag—two stars on a blue field—and under this Mayor Curley paid his tribute to "a citizen of Boston whose contribution to America and whose contribution to the uniform which he wears has been greater than that of any other citizen within the last half century."

Admiral Byrd, in a short address following the presentation of a gold placque from the city, maintained the same modest attitude that has characterized him since his return to the United States.

"I must admit that I am overwhelmed by the reception that has been given us," he said. "We have never received such a warm reception and I can find no words to express how we feel about it. They say that Boston is conservative. We have not found it so today. I speak tonight only as spokesman for my companions. Those fellows did the things for which I am being honored tonight."

One side of the gold placque given the admiral bears the Latin inscription "Polman Qui Meruit Ferat," "Let him bear the palm who has earned it." On the reverse side it reads, "To Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd, U. S. N., ideal citizen, dauntless explorer, who penetrated unknown regions and extended the frontiers of knowledge."

In making the presentation, the mayor said:

"This placque is of the same character of metal as the honored guest of the evening—purest gold."

This gave the signal for another ovation, lasting several minutes.

AIDES INTRODUCED

Then each of the admiral's companions on the expedition was introduced and given a mounted silver shield. The men included Norman B. Vaughan, Edward E. Goodale, Frederick E. Crockett, all Harvard men and the "three musketeers" of the expedition; Supply Officer George Black, Charles Lofgren of Everett, Byrd's personal aide; Capt. Frederick D. Melville, skipper of the City of New York; John Bird, Arnold Clark, Master Sergeant Victor H. Czejka, Henry T. Harrison, Jr., Bernt Balchen and Lieut. Harold June.

Admiral Byrd then introduced the scientists who made the trip. They were: Dr. Francis D. Coman of Harvard, Thomas Mulroy, Dr. Barnes Halder, of Detroit; Dr. R. L. Willcox, of New Zealand, and Dr. Lawrence M. Gould of Ann Arbor, Mich., second in command.

Mrs. Byrd, the admiral's wife, was seated at the head table. Reference to her as "the patient, retiring, modest woman who has given so much of her time to the United States of America" drew rounds of applause.

CHILDREN AT HOME

A special small table at the foot of the head table had been reserved for the three Byrd children, but the lateness of the hour, coupled with the excitement of the day's events, prompted the decision, at the last moment, to leave them at the Brimmer st. home.

Rear Admiral Louis M. Nulton, new commandant of the First Naval District, brought the greetings of the navy. He described Byrd, whom he has known since boyhood, as a man typifying the highest ideals of the country's maritime forces.

Brig.-Gen. Merithew L. Walker, commandant of the First Corps Area, represented the army, and Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, retired commander of the 26th Division, represented the American Legion.

Governor Allen, in bringing the well wishes of the Commonwealth, declared:

"Admiral Byrd, you have earned an enduring place in history. So long as our country endures the spirit you have exemplified shall endure. We pay tribute to your splendid courage, ability and genius."

A note of sadness was injected into the welcome as Capt. Alvin C. Howes, State commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, was led to the microphone to bring the greetings of Civil War veterans.

Justice George Augustus Sanderson of the Supreme Court represented the judiciary.

HUNT GARRETT AT NANTASKET

Boston police inspectors are conducting a systematic search at Nantasket today for Oliver B. Garrett.

Persistent rumors, coupled with several tips from underworld sources, to the effect that the former liquor raider has been in hiding at the beach resort since his default in Superior Court on Monday, has resulted in a fine-tooth combing of the area.

Garrett, according to this information, chose a cottage near the waterfront for his hiding place some time before he was scheduled to go on trial for alleged extortion and larceny and took considerable pains to make it appear he had fled to New York.

The New York hunt, in charge of Sergt. William J. Harrow, Special Officers Conroy, Decker and McBrine and private detectives, was renewed this morning with impetus resulting from a long-distance telephone conversation between Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley and Sergt. Harrow.

The Suffolk County prosecutor informed the Boston officers in New York that he placed no faith in the report given Leopold Manfredonia, Garrett's bondsman, that the indicted raider would surrender in a few days. This opinion is shared by Garrett's counsel, Herbert F. Callahan, who said he would have knowledge of any plans being made for surrender. Garrett has not communicated with him, he said.

The authorities have interviewed two women whose names were connected with Garrett's disappearance—Jean Parker, who was yesterday questioned by Dist. Atty. Foley, and Helen Gordon, with whom police talked in New York. From neither source was any helpful information received.

Hoover to Greet Sea Fliers on Monday

Melbourne, Australia, June 28 (AP)—Squadron Leader Charles Kingsford-Smith, talking over the wireless telephone from New York to his fiancee, Miss Mary Powell, said he intended to leave England at the end of July on a solo flight to Australia in an attempt to beat Bert Hinkler's record.

New York, June 28 (AP)—Squadron Leader Charles Kingsford-Smith and his transatlantic flight crew plan to take off Wednesday for San Francisco on a non-stop flight that will complete circumnavigation of the globe for the famous monoplane Southern Cross and her commander.

Kingsford-Smith took off from Oakland, Cal., two years ago on a flight across the Pacific to Ausflew from Australia to England and last Thursday completed an east-to-west flight across the Atlantic from Ireland to New York, with a stop for fuel at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

After an official welcome from Mayor Walker at City Hall and a conversation with his fiancee, Miss Mary Powell, in Melbourne, Australia, over the radio-telephone, he went to Schenectady, N. Y., to talk to his parents today in Sydney, Australia, over a short wave radio at the General Electric plant.

In his telephone conversation with Miss Powell he reminded her of their engagement to be married in September.

After his radio talk today Kingsford-Smith returned from Schenectady to New York by plane to rejoin his companions, Evart Van Dyk, Capt. J. Patrick Saul and John W. Stannage. They will leave Monday by plane for Washington to be received by President Hoover, then return to New York to start the transatlantic flight.

RUSH COURTESY BILL FOR DO-X

Washington, June 28—Congressional wheels are today in motion to speed legislation allowing the DO-X flying boat to come to this country.

A bill extending the courtesy of the government and permitting the huge craft to come in free of duty has been introduced by Representative Royal S. Johnson (R.) of South Dakota.

It is held this great plane, with its 12 American-made motors, will stimulate air-mindedness in the United States. Quick response in approving the bill was expected.

A race against time to obtain passage of the Johnson resolution was under way. Faced with the likelihood that Congress will adjourn in a few days, supporters of the bill pressed for action.

Joined in the movement the executive committee of the District of Columbia department, American Legion, passed a resolution urging that Congress immediately pass the Johnson resolution.

SAVE FOUR FROM SINKING SLOOP

Catching sight of an S O S sent by flashlight from a foundering sloop in Long Island Sound, Capt. Robert Allen of the Eastern Steamship liner Boston picked up four youthful yachtsmen and brought them into Boston today.

Seven hundred passengers on the Boston bound from New York to this port saw the rescue.

The crew of the sloop were Louis Ehrlich, 28, of 1738 East 19th st., Brooklyn, who flashed the distress signal as darkness was swiftly falling; Mervin Williams, 25, of 33 West 50th st., New York; Guy Gottshalk, 19, of New York, and Charles Kaufman, 25, of Paterson, N. J.

Williams has played in this city in several stage shows, the last time opposite Blanche Yurka in "The Squall."

"That's what we hit after leaving Plum Island, at the tip of Long Island, bound to Port Jefferson N. Y., after a 10-days' cruise," he said. "Two squalls, in fact.

"The second ripped open the forward hatch and filled the hold with water. The engine was out of commission, and we couldn't trim the sails. The seas hit us broadside, we heeled over and filled.

"We flew the distress signal, but darkness was falling and Ehrlich then did his stunt with the flashlight, which brought aid."

Bo'sun's Mate Olson of the Boston got a lifeboat away in record time to make the rescue. The sloop, which is the Lord Gro, 43 feet long and valued at $15,000, is believed to have been towed to port by a yacht which appeared on the scene as the Boston got under way again.

Woman, 3 Men, Adrift in Boat, Rescued by Guard

The engine of their launch disabled, three men and a woman in a fishing party floated helplessly in the harbor hours until a Coast Guard boat went to their rescue, it was learned today.

Taking aboard Miss Marion Trouseau, John Munroe, Edward Cole and Oscar Bloomberg, the Coast Guard craft took the disabled motorboat in tow to Warren bridge, arriving shortly after midnight.

Acording to the Coast Guard officials the party had started fishing yesterday afternoon, their engine breaking down about dusk.

Will Hold Over Jury in Case Garrett Appears

In the anticipation that Oliver Garrett will present himself for trial during the next few days, jurors serving in the many sessions of the Suffork Superior court, will not be excused, although their term expires July 3.

If the Garrett trial could begin on or before July 3, it would avoid summoning special jurors, requiring several days, and the jurors now serving in the civil sessions could be enlisted into service in the criminal side of the court house.

Ordinarily the jurors would have been excused last night.

FIRST AMERICAN SAINTS TO BE CANONIZED

Pope Pius to Officiate at the Service in St. Peter's, With Magnificent Procession

Vatican City, June 28 (AP)—The first saints ever to be chosen from the North American continent, Blessed Jean de Brebeuf and his seven companions, who suffered martyrdom at the hands of Indians in Canada and northern New York in the first half of the 17th century, will have their apotheosis tomorrow in St. Peter's basilica.

Pope Pius in person will preside. Before the pontiff will move one of the most colorful processions imaginable, composed of representatives of all the men's religious orders of the Catholic church.

Another noted member of the Society of Jesus will be raised to sainthood tomorrow, Blessed Cardinal Robert Bellermine, distinguished theologian, who in a series of tracts refuted the contentions of King James I of England.

But the day will be that of the eight martyrs, victims of the red-skinned natives they endeavored to convert. Their canonization comes as a response to the ardent wish of Canadian and American Catholics, who have long held them in veneration and invoked their intercession in time of distress.

REWARD URGED FOR PET DOG

Lucky, the dog which rescued its young master, Robert Young, 12, of 39 Bradley st., Somerville, last April after the boy had fainted under a pile of screens in the cellar, is in line for a decoration, it was learned today.

Spratt's Dog Hero Award Committee announced Lucky is one of a score of dogs eligible for a national gold medal award for acts of heroism and devotion during the past six months.

Robert Young had been missing for eight hours when the unerring nose of his pet dog scented him and led Mrs. Irene Young, the boy's mother, to his unconscious form.

The boy had played "hookey" from school, and when his teacher demanded a note explaining his absence, became frightened. He went home, but slipped quietly into the cellar and hid under a pile of screens.

When he failed to appear that night his parents notified the police and a hunt was begun.

On April 8 Mrs. Young went to the cellar, Lucky following her. The dog immediately began an investigation of a pile of screens in a corner. His sniffings and moanings attracted Mrs. Young. Approaching, she saw the unconscious form of the missing boy, who had collapsed from hunger and exhaustion.

That night Lucky lined on steak.

Condition of Mrs. Edwin Lange of Oshkosh, Wis., also was greatly improved, but was described as still dangerous, necessitating her remaining here a few days longer.

Codman Hits Volstead Threats

Constitutional Liberty League Counsel Tells Women of Propaganda

By NANCY BREWSTER

Julian Codman, general counsel of the Constitutional Liberty League, speaking before 2000 Democratic women of Salem and North Shore at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, last night, told them not to be duped into believing that an era of liquor lawlessness and increased bootlegging activities would result if they voted for the repeal of the Baby Volstead Act next November.

He warned them against intimidation by "baseless threats of anarchy of the return of the obsolete and unwanted saloon."

The disrespect for the prohibition law which existed, he said, is created by the Eighteenth Amendment, fostered by the federal Volstead Act and he asked the audience to consider fact and not propaganda.

LEADERS ATTEND

The meeting, sponsored by the Salem Dolly Madison Club, an organization of Democratic women, is an annual event with the club. Mrs. Joseph Doyle is president of the group and introduced as a special guest Mrs. Charles Hamlin, wife of the governor of the federal reserve board.

John F. Fitzgerald, Joseph O'Connell and Francis E. Rafter of the House of Representatives were but a few of the prominent Democrats there. One hundred and fifty tables of bridge preceded the meeting, held at 10 p. m. and lasting for an hour. The club calls the event an "Annual Al Smith Party."

Codman attacked as propagandists U. S. Dist.-Atty. Tarr, Prof. Nixon Carver and Prof. Hall. He said they were spreading all over the state frightening propaganda that the repeal of the Baby Volstead Act would bring upon the people an era of liquor lawlessness, that rum running and bootlegging would increase inordinately and that highways would be still more unsafe than they are today.

PARAMOUNT REASON

Denying the charges he said:

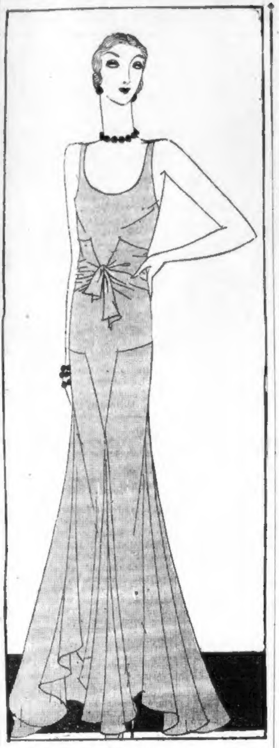
"This propaganda is being deliberately spread to frighten conscientious people who are opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment into voting to retain the Baby Volstead law, for unless such people can be thus intimated, the repeal of the Baby Volstead law by a large majority is absolutely certain and a deadly blow will be struck at the life of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"The paramount reason for the repeal is that it is the most effective way for our people to strike at the Eighteenth Amendment and accomplish the ultimate repeal. It is the success of this attempt that our opponents dread and which they wish to avoid at all costs, even at the cost of deceiving the people."

Codman concluded his address by calling attention to New York without a state enforcement law and Chicago with one.

"Which is better governed?" he asked.

Silk Suits Offer Sheer Comfort for Hot Days



DELICATE PASTEL blue crepe romain is used in this smart dress for summer evenings. Deep V shaped decolletage in back. Large turquoise jewelry is used. (Sketched in Paris.)

From Paris Bureau, Boston Evening American.

Paris, June 28.

FOR SHEER COMFORT the silk suit eases into first position as an ideal late spring and early summer outfit. It has been many seasons, if ever at all, that the suit of thin silk has been so well or cleverly handled. Deft tailoring, strict attention to infinite details, clever manipulation of the fabric all combine to create a costume replete with chic and cool comfort.

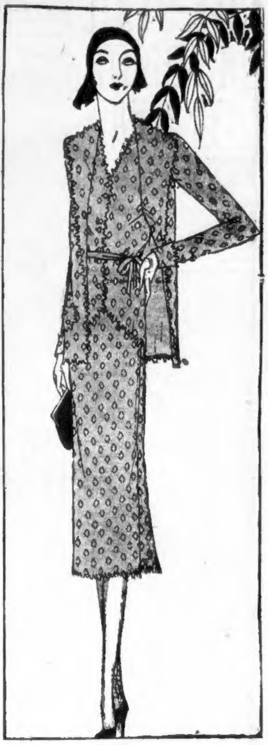
The principal criticism formerly leveled against the suit of silk was that it soon acquired a dishevelled look and that the skirt hung unevenly and poorly. But now all of these unpleasant drawbacks have been faced and vanquished and you may expect a reasonable amount of wear from your suit and the assurance that it will be good-looking as well as useful, an ideal combination always.

Evening frocks continue to offer a fertile field for the designer able to combine the picturesque with the highlights of the mode. Beautifully cut and draped, often made of semi-sheer materials, such frocks should do yoeman duty throughout the season without ever being conspicuous for their period of service. Very little or no attempt is made to embellish or trim these frocks and they are thus able to acquire and preserve an air of expensive simplicity, a goal toward which every woman who comprehends the subtleties of style, constantly strives.

The simple but very smart dress for summer evenings, sketched for this page is from Mirande, who makes it of delicate pastel blue crepe romain. The soft folds at the waistline are drawn into two looped ends knotting in front.

The very wide and circularly cut godets which form the flaring skirt flounces are spaced at regular intervals marked by descending points at the front and sides of the yoke.

In Chanel's summer collection is shown the three-piece ensemble which is of green tussor with a printed green and white diamond motif. The frock consists of a sleeveless jumper and a skirt pleated at one side. The jacket is hip length and has extremely wide revers but no collar. All the edges are cut in an uneven toothed line stitched over and over to prevent fraying.



THREE PIECE ENSEMBLE is of green tussor with printed green and white diamond motif. It is from the Chanel's summer collection. Note uneven edges. (Sketched in Paris.)

Clubwomen Urged to Create Friendships at All Their Meetings

In case you don't know—

Sir James Barrie once wrote on the question of making and keeping friends that the secret could be found in the conscious knowledge that every one is lonesome. I offer this to Massachusetts clubwomen that they might keep it in mind the next time they sit by a stranger at a club meeting. What with clubs growing and the membership increasing at every club meeting, many strangers sit side by side in the meeting hall.

If a woman is worthy of club membership, friendship with her is likewise worthy. But friendship comes when woman realizes the worth of another. Should clubwomen be conscious of such worth of each other?

Polish Organ Has Supplement Printed in English Language

Do you know that Bluszez, the "weekly magazine for women consecrated to social and literary questions," published at Warsaw, Poland, is now including a two-page suplement printed in English. This because it is reaching out and contacting the woman of the English-speaking countries of the world?

The Polish Federation of University Women, organized in 1926 and now a member of the International Federation of University Women, is actively responsible for the marked change and glowing tribute to the emancipation of women.

Legion Women Will Act as Guides When Auxiliary Convenes

Suppose you are a visitor to Boston for the American Legion Auxiliary national convention in Boston next October; you have seldom or never been away from home; you are more or less bewildered by the confusion of arrival in a strange city after a long journey; you have been whizzed from a railroad station to your hotel; you are tired; you have never heard of Symphony Hall, where the convention meetings are to be held—

The answer to all these suppositions is the liason committee, headed by Mrs. W. E. Bunker of Springfield and born into being from the brilliant idea of Mrs. Franklin Lee Bishop, past president of the national auxiliary and general chairman of the national convention.

Mrs. Bunker is now selecting 150 women for her committee who will act as personal escorts to the visitors; guide them from their hotels to the meeting hall, arrange for motor trips, show them the way to the grandstands for the parade, and be the embodiment of a grand hostess.

By this means do the convention committee hope to solve the problem next October, happy in the thought that thousands of women from all over the country will be made comfortable and sent home "sold" on Boston as a great town.

Boom Long Skirts

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.
Universal Service Special Cable

Paris, June 28—The international social world of Paris turned out en masse yesterday afternoon to witness the annual fashion parade at the Auteuil race track.

Incidentally, the fashionable audience received a thrill when Vicomte de Rivaud's Strelitz came back strongly to capture the famous Prix Des Drags. Only five days ago an open ditch eliminated Strelitz as the favorite in the Grand Steeplechase of Paris over the same course.

The feature of the day was the tremendous attack by an army of mannikins determined to put across trailing skirts for formal afternoon wear.

Whether the attack will be successful ultimately remains to be seen for yesterday the only persons thus garbed were the professional mannikins. Society itself continued to appear in more conservative clothes.

Perhaps the annual garden party at the Polo Club today, or the Grand Prix at Longchamps tomorrow, may give a more serious indication of the trend of society's taste.

There were even three tallyhos, loaded with beautiful women and formally dressed men, as against but one last year.

WHDH SCORES IN BROADCAST ON BYRD

For the first time in the history of New England, on the occasion of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's reception by his "home town," radio fans were able to follow the details of a celebration through a point to point hookup arranged by the Boston Evening American in co-operation with Station WHDH.

This point to point broadcasting arrangement was made so that not one single detail of the city of Boston reception to Adm. Byrd was lost by the hundreds of thousands of radio listeners throughout New England.

While the official celebration did not begin until 2:20 p. m., due to the tardiness of the train, the American went on the air, through WHDH, for the afternoon promptly at 1 o'clock.

PROGRAM STARTS

At that hour the "mike" was opened at the Parkman bandstand and Arthur Roberts, one of New England's most experienced announcers started to tell the radio fans about what was taking place on the Common and who was arriving there.

His efforts to make his broadcast interesting was of course aiding by the splendid music of the 101st Infantry Band under the direction of James Coughlin.

Announcer Roberts told of the veterans of the Spanish and Civil wars, members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion, all of whom were massing for the reception.

By this time of course Admiral Byrd's train was almost inside the South Station terminal, and the controls were transferred in a fraction of a second to a microphone which had been placed directly opposite Track 26 at the South Station.

TELLS OF ARRIVAL

Here Newcombe Thompson, another WHDH announcer, was on hand to tell of the arrival of Admiral Byrd and Mrs. Byrd.

He explained in detail how the train had come in first on Track [illegible], and how another locomotive was standing in readiness to pick up the car of the Byrd party so that it could be backed on to Track [illegible] for the admiral to be as close to the station entrance as possible.

Thompson told the radio audience how Mayor James M. Curley walked over to the gate, and after greeting Detective John Shaughnessy of the railroad police, stepped up to Admiral Byrd and with extended hand greeted the famed Antarctic explorer and his wife.

They heard him tell about Mayor Curley distributing the beautiful bouquets and of the reaction of Admiral and Mrs. Byrd to these tributes.

TALKS TO WOMEN

Then Miss Muriel Reger, another WHDH announcer, stepped before the "mike" to tell the women folks just what Mrs Byrd was wearing, and how she looked. Miss Reger's description of Mrs. Byrd's attire must have convinced the feminine contingent that she knew all there is to know about women's clothing.

After this Thompson returned to the "mike," and you heard him tell you of the departure of the official automobile parade from the South Station, of the blizzard of ticker tape and scrap paper that came showering down upon the streets the minute that the car containing Adm. Byrd, Mayor Curley and the rest of the party emerged from Dorchester ave. into Summer st.

In another second they were back on the Common. Back with Roberts, who continued to tell what was happening in connection with the celebration, from beginning to end.

Station WHDH and the Boston Evening American promised that the Byrd reception would be covered in detail.

To do so they made radio history in New England.

MODEL YACHTS IN FINALS

The finals of the model yacht races to select an American entry for the international races in England will be held today on the Charles river, just above the Lars Anderson bridge.

At the end of the second day of the tryouts John Black's entry, the Boston 3d, led the field with 34 points.

Joseph Branham of Washington, D. C., is second with 27 points, his boat, the Matey 3d, faring very well in yesterday afternoon's race. S. H. Cox's entry, the Yankee Doodle 2d, from Cleveland, holds third position.

Some of the races yesterday were closely contested, especially the second race between S. H. Cox and J. B. Reynolds, the former winning by a scant half length when Reynolds' Poinsetta hit the shore.

SHIP OFFICIALS ARE SUED

Six counts alleging mismanagement of the Bay State Shipping Co. by Timothy W. Murphy of Newton, assessor for the city of Boston, and Melvin F. Hill of Brookline, prominent realtor, have been filed in Suffolk Superior Equity Court.

The suit is being brought by Atty. Harry N. Guterman, in behalf of Walter W. McCoubrey of Lexington, formerly vice president and traffic manager of the shipping concern, which occupies the army base on a conditional lease from the U. S. shipping board.

McCoubrey owns 25 of the 100 shares and alleges that the value of these are being "greatly impaired, if not entirely destroyed."

The six counts in the bill are:

That the corporation is being grossly mismanaged by Murphy and Hill.

That the business of the terminal is being carried on in such a manner that the lease should be broken.

That contracts are being violated and repudiated.

That the corporation has been in danger of, and still is, facing costly lawsuits.

That excessive salaries are being paid out.

That improper expenditures are being made without legal justification.

McCoubrey indicated that if the demands to examine the books of the company justify his contentions, he will ask the court for a receiver to preserve the assets of the corporation.

LORING-GREENOUGH MANSION, JAMAICA PLAIN.

A SQUARE, ROOMY OLD MANSION in pleasing surroundings at 12 South st., Jamaica Plain, has come into the possession of the Jamaica Plain Tuesday Club. The house dates back to 1758, when it was built by Commodore Joshua Loring. He bought the property in 1752 from John Polley.

Loring was a Tory, so the mansion and acreage about was confiscated, being sold at public auction to Col. Isaac Sears.

Commodore Loring was a brave man. He was in command of British troops on Lake Ontario and was wounded before Quebec. He eventually was obliged to flee to England.

In 1775, while besieging Boston, Gen. Nathaniel Greene commanded the Rhode Island troops of the American forces from this mansion as headquarters. He was ordered shortly to defend Long Island and the house became a hospital for the Roxbury camp.

Fifty of the soldiers who died here were buried in the old Walter St. burial ground, called after Rev. Nathaniel Walter, first minister to the first meeting-house in 1712, of the Second Parish of Roxbury, which stood close by.

After Col. Isaac Sears bought the house, in 1784, it came into the possession of Thomas Greenough's son, David, who married the Widow Anne Doane. She had purchased the property from Col. Sears.

The frame of the house came from England, and stands on the site of a garrison house used by the neighborhood during the early Indian raids.

South and Centre Strets are easily reached by the electrics from Boston proper.

PACT CONTRARY TO U. S. STAND AT GENEVA

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN
Universal Service

Washington, June 28—The American delegation at the London disarmament conference accepted an international repartition of naval armament on the very basis which caused another American delegation to quit the Geneva conference three years before.

This was the charge made yesterday by Senator Arthur R. Robinson of Indiana against the commitments of the London treaty with regard to the American navy.

The attack of Senator Robinson was delivered over a nation-wide chain of the National Broadcasting Company. It was the third cumulative charge made on the three-power treaty since Secretary Stimson presented it to the Senate for approval.

In the controversy over the treaty, Secretary Stimson was the first proponent of the London pact to go before the nation and broadcast a defense of the treaty. He was vigorously answered by Senator Hiram Johnson of California. Then Senator David Reed of Pennsylvania, also a member of the American delegation which framed the treaty, pleaded for it and he in turn was answered by Senator McKellar of Tennessee.

The rebuttal of Senator Robinson yesterday answered the address for the treaty by his namesake and member of the London delegation, Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, minority leader.

LOS ANGELES, JUNE 28 —"Ten Nights in a Bar Room" to slow music and dialogue. Can you bear it? I was inclined to laugh until I heard what plans Willis Kent, independent producer, had made to put this favorite sob sister into the talkies. Mr. Kent has leased space in the Tecarts studios where the first of the old-time melodramas to be given dialogue will be filmed.

YOU HAVEN'T heard all, gentle readers, either. William Farnum and Thomas Santschi, who created the famous fight in the silent version of "The Spoilers," are booked for an encore battle. Norton S. Parker who is writing the story has put in this extra entertainment. In addition to Mr. Farnum and Mr. Santschi who are the featured players, Mary Carr, Claire Dowell, Evelyn Mills and Sheila Manors have agreed to play in this meller drammer. William O'Connor is the director and if this goes over, Mr. Kent has several other similar numbers up his sleeve.

I DON'T KNOW of anything that has made Hollywood happier than Lew Cody's complete return to health and the numerous jobs he is getting. Lew looks better than he has in years. He has taken care of himself and paid strict attention to staging a return to the screen. In that he seems to be successful, for he has just now been signed by Warners for one of the big parts in "Husbands' Privileges." James Hall, juvenile, has the other big lead. Irene Delroy is also in the cast. The story ought to be good since Hollywood's favorite wit.

ALWAYS IN the back of Clarence Brown's head has been the one idea. He has longed to make "The Strange Interlude." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has discouraged him and so have many other people who believe it will be almost impossible to produce this play on the screen. But Clarence is still unconvinced and while in Europe he visited the author, Eugene O'Neil. ONeil, I am told, was much delighted with Brown's work on "Anna Christie."

NIGHT BEFORE CELEBRATION AT REVERE

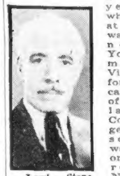
A reproduction of a scene from the late World War, depicting the latest methods of warfare and showing the actual bombardment of a city with anti-aircraft gun, cannons, bombs and rockets, will feature the night before the Fourth celebration at Revere Beach, the Playground of New England.

This exhibition will be so realistic that it will excel the ship bombing which was the high light of last year's pre-holiday celebration. Revere Beach has become noted for its night before the Fourth events and this one, to be staged Thursday night, is slated to be the best ever.

On the afternoon of the Fourth, as an added attraction, speed boat races will be run along the mile of waterfront and in full view of the crowds. Racing boats, capable of attaining a speed of 60 miles an hour, will compete for valuable prizes offered by the Bay State Yacht Club.

WAR VET STAR OF JAIL EPIC

Lewis Stone, enacts the role of the warden in "The Big House," at Loew's State the coming week. For many years Stone, who was born at Worcester, was a prominent New York legitimate actor. Visiting California, he became the star of the old Belasco Stock Co. in Los Angeles. His first screen role was in "Honor's Altar." He returned to New York to appear in "The Brat."



Lewis Stone

In 1917, he left to go overseas as a United States Army captain and later won the commission of major. On his return he re-entered motion pictures. With the rise of the talking pictures, he became one of their best-known exponents.

SMART REVUE FOR WILBUR

Odette Myrtil, Fred Keating, Val and Ernie Stanton and Joe Penner are in the array of talent which is being assembled by Alexander Yokel and Alexander Leftwich for their new revue, "Tattle Tales," which has its world premiere at the Wilbur Monday, July 14. Add to this list the name of Boston's own favorite, Mickey Alpert, who has succumbed to the lure of the footlights.

Ned McGurn, a newcomer in the East, is staging the dances; Alfred Cheney Johnston, noted New York photographer, is the art director, and Florence Clakins, a New York stylist, has conceived and designed the costuming, which is to be in modern dress.

VIVIENNE WAS CARMEN AT SIXTEEN

Vivienne Segal, featured player in "Bride of the Regiment," now playing at the New B. F. Keith's, has the distinction of being the youngest "Carmen" of the stage. At the age of 16, while still a student in the convent of the Sisters of Mercy in Philadelphia, Miss Segal enacted the role of the Spanish charmer.

Her first success prompted Miss Segal to essay the stage on her graduation from the convent. In a comparatively short time she found herself the heroine of the original "Desert Song" company. She followed a long run with that company by a leading role in Ziegfeld's "Three Musketeers."

Miss Segal's stage success, due to her great personal charm and voice, brought contracts to sing in First National pictures. "Bride of the Regiment" is her third Vitaphone picture. In it Miss Segal sings "Dream Away," the song which acts as the climax of the production.

Other selections in this operetta are "Broken Hearted Lover," sung by Allan Prior, and Sigmund Romberg's composition, "When Hearts Are Young."

Walter Pigeon, Louise Fazenda, Ford Sterling and Lupino Lane are others of the featured players in the large cast of "Bride of the Regiment."

'Dine and Dance' Steamer

BYRD POLAR SHOTS ARE EPOCHAL

By HARRIS MORGAN

THE NEW ANTARCTIC film, "With Byrd at the South Pole," now playing at the Washington Street Olympia and Uptown, is far and away out of the class of most such pictures. It ranks with "Chang" and "Grass" as an exciting chronicle. Even the titles are well written in this adventurous cinema-play, which is mostly silent, and even more pleasing for that reason.

THE FILM starts at the beginning of the Byrd expedition from New York, it takes the two ships, City of New York and Eleanor Bolling south to the ice barrier, it shows the founding of Little America, and a blizzard at 22 degrees below zero.

For added interest, the penguins parade about the snow, looking for all the world like miniature Charlie Chaplins, and two seals have a ferocious fight in the white wilderness.

Willard Vandeer Veer

All this might be a good deal like other film travelogues were it not for the fine photography and the equally fine cutting. Willard Vander Veer and Joseph T. Rucker used their cameras with as much discretion and artistry as the Russians; they exhibit moving shots, and all their exteriors better than most of those that are made under easier conditions in California.

JULIAN JOHNSON did the titles, and his captions are far superior to anything the films have seen since "The Big Parade." Moreover, the musical score has been very ably adjusted indeed. Incidentally, the quality of silence helps the film a good deal. Its scenes are ten times more impressive than if they had been cluttered up with conversation and "sound effects."

Certainly Rear Admiral Byrd is no film actor by profession, but he screens much better than most of Hollywood's finest. His facial expressions and his motions are easily understood, and so are those of all the rest of that gallant crew that fought their way to the Farthest South.

CROWDS SEEK NORUMBEGA

Phil Baxter and his Texas Tommies, representing the West in a musical way, started an engagement Monday at Norumbega Park's new Totem Pole ballroom, drawing crowds all week. The creator of "Piccolo Pete," "Harmonic Harry" and other song hits is being held over with his band for next week. Baxter surprised the ballroom guests by introducing a "personality girl" of the "boop-boop-a-doop" persuasion for some peppy songs. Her name is Alberta Haynes and she seems to be pleasing the crowds. Totem Pole ballroom has inaugurated a new policy regarding jazz bands. Beginning with Baxter, only orchestras of national acclaim will appear at the ballroom for periods of two weeks each.

HISTORIAN IN FILM DEBUT

"Three Centuries of Massachusetts" is the title of the unique talking film which is to be first released in Symphony Hall on Monday evening, July 7. This will mark the entrance of a great historian into the medium of the talking film. Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart, of Harvard University, has directed the production of "Three Centuries of Massachusetts." He appears on the screen from time to time, while his voice accompanies all the scenes with terse comment and spirited interpretation.

"Three Centuries of Massachusetts" has been made by the University Film Foundation at Harvard. It tells the vivid story of the development of the colony throughout its history. Interesting details are correctly portrayed—the landing of the pilgrims, the struggle with the Indians, the clearing and plowing of the land, the household activities. Sites of historical importance have been photographed in all parts of Massachusetts in the re-enactment of important episodes. The gradual development of industry, commerce and transportation is graphically shown up to our own day.

"Holiday" Completed

Film version of Philip Barry's stage success, "Holiday," has been completed at the Pathe studios.

Mary Nolan Starred in "Young Desire" at Park

Mary Nolan is starring this week at the Park in "Young Desire," tale of a beautiful carnival dancer, who decides to turn to the paths of respectability and straightway falls in love with a strait-laced young man. William Janey plays the hero and Ralf Harolde, Mae Busch and Claire McDowell are also in the cast. The whole affair is based on the play called "Carnival."

One the same bill, Kathryn Crawford and Ken Maynard appear in "Mountain Justice."

"The Runaway Bride" at Keith's Tomorrow Only

Due to the fact that "Bride of the Regiment," which opened today at the new B. F. Keith's, has not been approved for Sunday showing, the management announces that tomorrow only the feature production will be "The Runaway Bride," in which Lloyd Hughes and Mary Astor are the stars.

BEBE DANIELS THRIVES ON OBSTACLES

Handicaps to Bebe Daniels, newlywed star of "Alias French Gertie" at the Keith-Albee, are like the smell of gunpowder to a cavalry horse.

Troubles began when she entered the films 12 years ago and have continued to the present, but she has overcome every one of them.

When Bebe first went into pictures she was told that her nose wouldn't do. She went to a plastic surgeon and ordered a Greek profile. Today it's her most attractive feature.

There was a time when she found herself chained to comedies, cheap "quickie" slapsticks. She attended dramatic schools and studie languages and singing. She also found time to create fresh ideas to keep her comedies above the level of mediocrity.

Recently film officials decided Bebe Daniels' screen career had spun itself to a dull gray finish, and that talkies had reserved no place for her. Bebe refused to agree with them. She went to William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of RKO productions, and confided that she had a singing voice. The whole world knows it now.

Bebe's performance in "Rio Rita" made that film one of the outstanding talkies. Since then the star has appeared in two Radio pictures, "Love Comes Along," and "Smooth as Satin."

She was once cast in a picture called "Swim Girl Swim," and couldn't swim a lick. Before the picture was finished she swam like a champion.

"Handicaps are the incentive to success!" That's Bebe Daniels' motto.

Sea Trip to Plymouth

Nantasket Steamboat Co. offers a Plymouth trip that skirts along the South Shore, out into Massachusetts bay, thence around to Plymouth. The sea trip is beautiful and refreshing, and there is a stopover of two hours at Plymouth to permit visitors to do their sightseeing in that historic town.

'SONS O' GUNS' FOR JOLSON

Al Jolson, minus Sonny Boy and Mammy, and using both knees for walking purposes, has moved over to the United Artists Studio, where he will be making pictures henceforth with Douglas Fairbanks, Ronald Colman and the other stars of that organization.

His first film, "Sons o' Guns," based on the Broadway stage hit, will have Lily Damita in the leading feminine role, the part she played on the stage in New York just prior to her recent departure for a European vacation. Samuel Goldwyn loaned Miss Damita to Joseph M. Schenck, who is producing the Jolson films.

Miss Damita's first appearance in an American film was made for Mr. Goldwyn, who releases through United Artists, in "The Rescue," Herbert Brenon's picturization of the Joseph Conrad story in which Ronald Colman appeared as Tom Lingard and Miss Damita as Mrs. Edith Travers.

Mr. Jolson is, of course, the gentleman who replaced the heart of the cinema with a photoelectric cell.

G. O. P. WITHOUT LEADERS, SAYS FITZGERALD

The Democratic party will sweep the State this fall if the party nominates "red-blooded men who know conditions and will fight," former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, predicted last night to the members of the Dolly Madison Democratic Club at the New Ocean House, Swampscott. Fitzgerald said in part:

"Signs multiply that the Republican party, instead of working to correct the evils of unemployment, is doing just the opposite in order that wages may be reduced.

"In no other way can one explain the fact that although the present postoffice was vacated by the Postoffice Department in November, 1928, more than a year and a half ago, the old foundations have not been fully removed and it is anybody's guess when the new building will be actually under construction.

"In the Navy Yard conditions are very bad and from present indications will be worse before they are better.

"There is no Republican leadership in Massachusetts today. The big men are gone and their places are being occupied by men who cannot fill the shoes worn by former leaders."

PORT OF BOSTON NEWS

By CARL MORRISON

Formal demands will soon be made upon the U. S. Shipping Board at Washington to make an investigation to determine whether or not there should be changes in its policies as related to the local terminal.

These demands will be a "follow-up" on those recently made by a committee of prominent harbor boosters who went to Washington with specific charges they wanted investigated. A high city official also wrote, asking for an investigation.

Under terms of the agreement, the Board may terminate its local lease on six months' notice without giving any cause. It may also end the lease abruptly without any notice if cause may be proven.

"DUTY TO CARGO"

The next chapter of the daily series of "Duty to Cargo" articles by the operations' manager of the American-Hawaiian line, reads:

"Once the goods are received, next comes the bill of lading. This must go into the shippers' hands as promptly as possible so that he can bank it, if desired. To be bankable, it must be in perfect shape—accurately and legibly made out, containing all the information the shipper requires. It must contain a correct statement of the rates; for if a rate is wrong it means annoyance for the shipper; also, how advance charges, if any, are made up, including a statement of the charges of the connecting carrier and how they are based."

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

W. B. Chadbourne, import freight manager of the Canadian National and of the Grand Trunk, is the subject of today's harbor sketch.

Bachrach Photo
W. B. Chadbourne

"Chad" is known as the "flax seed king." He has probably done more than any other individual in increasing the import of Argentine flax seed through Boston harbor, bringing the earlier small totals up to an impressive figure.

He is also an expert on tariff rates and classifications. He is a booster of the port in theory and practice, and was one of the originators of the Foreign Commerce Club. He is also in the Traffic Club. His hobby is canoe racing, and he has a reputation for this gained from many races here and in Canada.

EASTERN CHANGES

We understand on reliable authority that Capt. Aaron Wall of Arlington is to relinquish his berth Sunday as captain of the President Warfield of the Eastern Steamship Line. He will become master of a private yacht. iHs successor is reported to be Capt. Roland Litchfield of Winthrop, who has been chief pilot on the Warfield. He has been with the line for years, working his way up from second mate to master of several of the ships. His new berth is an important one. On her second trip from Boston, the Warfield's entire space of about 275 was sold out.

SEA-GOING CHRONICLE

William Brown of Roslindale and Joseph Matola of East Boston, for Dutch West Indies; Max Talcove of Boston and Bartley P. Foley of Somerville, for Texas; Joseph Tizcinski of Fall River, for Norfolk.

PLEA OF WIFE ENDS AMNESIA OF HUSBAND

Benjamin W. Lewis, wealthy automobile dealer of Boothbay Harbor, Me., who disappeared April 15, and was found in Boston yesterday, is a patient in Peter Bent Brigham Hospital today prior to his return to his Maine home.

He had been a victim of amnesia during a business trip from his home to Wiscasset and would probably not have been located if a friend had not recognized him on a Boston street and notified his wife.

When Lewis was met at police headquarters by his wife he failed to recognize her at first, but did later after she pleaded with him to try and remember.

When he left Boothbay Harbor nothing was heard of Lewis until a friend saw him on the street here. His wife, Mrs. Beatrice Lewis, came here immediately and enlisted the aid of Leslie Blake of 82 Adams ave., Saugus. The police were notified, but Mrs. Lewis and Blake took up the search themselves, also.

Mrs. Lewis caught sight of her husband on Tremont st. early Wednesday morning, but he disappeared before she could get out of her automobile. Every day this week, Mrs. Lewis and Blake have walked the streets and success crowned their efforts yesterday when Blake saw Lewis crossing Washington st. at Avery st.

He followed him along Washington st. to the Old South Meeting House, where Lewis bought a Portland paper. While he was making the purchase, Blake told Traffic Officer Gilman that he recognized the man. The officer took Lewis to headquarters.

B. F. Is Given Party When She Leaves

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

One convoy of wounded after another is the lot of the women's ambulance corps of which Helen Smith is a member. Commandant, whom Tosh has christened "Mrs. Itch," is a hard task-master. Strenuous work, little sleep and poor food show on the girls. When Smithy's mother writes giving her silly war views, "Smithy," picturing the war-ravaged men, revolts. But letters from her war-nurse sister, Trix, are treats. Deaths are numerous and heart-rending.

CHAPTER 16

The B. F. is leaving for England in the morning. She says she is ill, but the truth is she is too bored to stick it any longer. We are having a farewell party to the great annoyance of those who are trying to sleep in the adjacent cubicles.

We have drawn our beds closely together and have spread a large sheet of brown paper on which repose our joint contributions—biscuits, a few ounces of real butter, two tins of sardines, 23 cigarettes, a jam-pot of potted meat, a stale seed cake, and last but by no means least, two bottles of vin rouge, which we are drinking out of cups borrowed from the canteen.

It tastes, candidly, rather like red ink, but we are not fussy. It is contraband, of course. If commandant discovered it in our room—but why worry, it is worth the risk. It is wet and warming and will run to three cups each, and we toast the daring of Tosh, who is responsible for its presence.

Hilarious
Vin Rouge Helps

On arriving at the station this forenoon she discovered the train would be two to three hours late—a mere trifle here—took a chance, dashed into the town some miles away out of bounds except to special permits—secured the wine and managed to return in time to pick up her two hospital sisters.

The butter we owe to the B. F., who has been saving it since last mail day; the sardines are from Etta Potato; the potted meat from Skinny; the Bug has given the biscuits, while the stale cake is my contribution to the feast.

We are all a trifle hilarious, partly because of the vin rouge, and partly because the thaw is beginning which makes it several degrees warmer already. We sit, feet in flea-bags, laughing and deriding the protests from those who want to slumber. The provisions disappear quickly. The potted meat is homemade and goes down amazingly well with sweet biscuits. Tosh invents a savoury—'Sardines a la B. F.', slices of cake with mashed sardines in between. It is surprisingly good.

"It's time we toasted The B. F." Tosh glances at her wrist-watch. "I expect we ought to let those poor long-suffering wretches sleep before the midnight convoy."

Tosh Speaks
Girls in Laughter

"I should say so," agrees a voice from next door.

"No," we cry selfishly, "it isn't every night we have a farewell party. We don't want to go sleep. Let's have some speeches. We'll all make speeches. Etta Potato first."

"Etta Potato! Etta Potato!"

"Shut up," yells the voice.

"Come on, Etta Potato."

"There will never be a better B. F. in this convoy," declaims Etta Potato with unintentional wit. We shriek with joy.

"Now The Bug."

The Bug smiles.

"I wish The B. F. all the luck that she can't help having. She will always fall on her feet. She is the type life loves. Life will give her its best gifts generously, with both hands. She has youth, money, beauty. I envy her all of those, but most of all I envy her genuine love of conventional things—the little things of life that make for happiness. Good luck, B. F. and happiness. The B. F.'s of this world are to be envied."

We applaud but we are puzzled at The Bug's tone. Tosh shoots her an inquiring glance but The B. F. smiles rather vacantly and says:

"Thank you, dear, so sweet of you."

We cry for Tosh.

"Tosh! Speech!"

"Shut up, you noisy hounds—"

"Ladies and those wenches next door with flapping ears—"

"Tosh, darling—"

"This sad, sad parting would

Court Sets Aside Eldridge Divorce

CASE TO BE RETRIED IN FALL

Broker's Plea That Defense Was Incompetent Wins New Hearing

Although divorced last year after one of the most sensational trials in the history of the Commonwealth, Joseph I. Eldridge, Boston broker, and Mrs. Helen L. Eldridge, Newton society leader, today find themselves just as firmly bound by the bonds of matrimony as they ever were.

Yesterday afternoon Judge Charles N. Harris in Middlesex Probate Court vacated the divorce decree granted her, which became absolute last January, and the case is to be reopened for a further hearing. This time it will be solely on the issue as to whether or not Mrs. Eldridge condoned the cruelty alleged to have been committed by her husband.

NEGLECTED PLEA

Yesterday's action by Judge Harris is the aftermath of a hearing granted last week by the court on a motion of Eldridge's counsel David Stoneham, asking to have the decree set aside and a rehearing allowed. He based his motion on the grounds that former counsel for the broker, William Hirsch, who has since died, failed to plead condonation to the charges of cruelty.

In his order vacating the decree yesterday, Judge Harris handed down a memorandum which read in part as follows:

"Helen L. Eldridge—Joseph I. Eldridge. In the above entitled case a divorce was granted to the libellant on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment and the court denied the motion of the libelee, made after the conclusion of the trial, to be allowed to plead condonation, which, by inadvertence or otherwise, his former counsel, now deceased, failed earlier to plead.

"He has now filed a petition praying that the decree of divorce be set aside and a rehearing granted, and renewing his application that he be allowed to amend his answer by pleading condonation.

"The libelee appealed from the original decree and duly requested a report of material facts, but he has now waived his appeal.

HEARING IN FALL

"In the recent case of Sanderson vs. Sanderson, the Supreme Court reversed the decree of the trial judge who had refused to permit counsel for the libelee to argue the question of condonation on the ground that no answer had been filed nor the defense specially pleaded. In that case the court held, in effect, that, if the facts are not in dispute, the question whether the divorce should be denied, because to grant it would be against public policy, is one that can be raised by a libelee on motion and which, if presented by counsel, or noticed by the court, should be passed upon by the court.

"And it may be conceded that in this case evidence was introduced at the trial which would have been competent to be considered on the question of condonation."

When the case comes up now on a rehearing the broker will allege that his wife condoned his alleged cruelty. If the court rules she did condone the alleged cruelty she definitely loses the divorce decree. Rehearing of the case will probably not take place until fall.

NO REDUCTION IN $1 GAS CHARGE

Utilities Commission Finds Consolidated Failed to Earn Dividend

There will be no reduction in the Boston Consolidated Gas Company's rate of $1 per thousand cubic feet with a 50-cent service charge.

After lengthy hearings, the public utilities commission found that the company failed to earn its full dividend for the last reportable year.

INCREASE OPPOSED

The movement for a reduction in gas rates was started when the company charged a flat $1.20 per thousand cubic feet with no service charge.

A petition for a reduction was filed and the department ordered the schedule changed so that the rate would be $1 with a service charge of 50 cents.

This decision of the commission failed to satisfy the city of Boston and the case was re-opened.

In its decision, the commission said in part:

"In the present case, both representatives of the Mayor of Boston and of the petitioning customers expressed the view that the 50-cent service charge should be maintained, but urged that the commodity price of gas should be slightly reduced.

CUT PREMATURE

"The annual return of the company for the year 1929 shows that the company failed to earn its declared dividend of 8 per cent on par or approximately 6½ per cent on par and premium, by $142,000. The new rates had been in effect only during the last three months of the year.

"We feel that we would not be warranted under the circumstances in ordering a reduction in the commodity rate at the present time and that the company should be allowed to operate under the existing rates for a period of time sufficient to determine the results of such operation."

POLICE RULES CHANGED FOR HULTMAN

New Procedure Will Enable Speedier Promotion of Younger Officers

The Civil Service Commission has five important changes in procedure in connection with promotion examinations in the police department recommended by Police Commissioner Hultman in an effort to get younger superior officers.

The commissioner had requested the Civil Service Commission to make nine changes in procedure. Two were held for further consideration and two others the commission stated it was not necessary to change.

The purpose of all the changes asked by Commissioner Hultman was to shorten the length of time necessary to remain in one rank before being eligible for the next step upward. He also wanted permission to send up for special examinations for promotion men who had done specially meritorious work.

The commission agreed with the first suggestion of Commissioner Hultman that every patrolman continue to serve five years before being eligible for promotion.

One year was cut by the Civil Service Commission from the time in which sergeants have to wait before taking examination for lieutenant. They will now be eligible for the examination in two years. Lieutenants fared even better having to stay in that rank only one year in the future before they can try for a captaincy. Previously they had to wait three years.

The fifth suggestion of Commissioner Hultman will mean that in the future patrolmen from stations may be assigned as detectives and sergeants and lieutenants may be assigned from station houses to the Bureau of Criminal Investigation as detective sergeants and detective lieutenants.

The proposition of Hultman to allow him to recommend for promotion men who have done extraordinary acts of bravery was laid over for further consideration by the commission.

All's to the Merry Now

Pup Rescued After Hours in Sewer

Rex, two-months-old German puppy, owned by M. E. Davis, of 78 Peterboro st., fell 12 feet into a catch basin in Peterboro st. shortly before midnight, became entangled in the 12-inch pipe extending to another catch basin and was rescued early this morning after members of the Boston fire department, the sewer department and representatives of the Angell Memorial Hospital in Longwood ave., struggled for hours.

The dog was being taken for a stroll when it ran away from Davis. Being only a tiny dog, Rex slipped through the catch basin guard. Davis called Sidney Graves, night man at the Angell Memorial Hospital, and then lifted the catch basin cover and went to the bottom.

Rex was not there, but Graves did trace the dog into the pipe that extends from one basin to the other. The fire department and sewer departments were notified, and the firemen tried to siphon the dog out without success.

Sewer workers, by using plungers, forced the pup through the pipe into the waiting hands of Graves, who had remained in the catch basin for four hours, and the dog was rushed to the Angell Hospital. He was wrapped up in warm blankets and placed in a ward and when Davis left the hospital the pup was sleeping soundly.

55 Years in Service, Newton Man Will Retire Tuesday

When Water Commissioner J. Clifton Whitney of Newton retires from office Tuesday, after 55 years in the service of the city, he will enjoy the first vacation he has taken in 20 years.

Commissioner Whitney, who is 71 years old, entered the city's service at the age of 18, under its first mayor. His first employment was with the city's engineering department as a rodman.

He explained his failure to take a vacation in 20 years by declaring his duties have been too exacting to permit him to get away.

WILL DEDICATE CLINTON PORT TODAY

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Twenty-five airplanes from all parts of New England landed at Clinton Airport today to take part in the two day dedication of the new airport, scheduled to take place today and tomorrow.

The airport, bought and developed by Bob Balboni, is two miles from the center of Clinton, on top of a hill, and is considered one of the best of its type in New England. Each runway is over 1500 feet long and 300 feet wide.

Featured on the programs for the two days is John "Red" Harman, considered by flyers to be one of the best commercial stunt pilots in the country. Harman is famous for his outside loops, and it is rumored that he will perform this most dangerous stunt sometime during the two day show.

The planes which arrived early today or late yesterday included every type with the exception of the giant tri-motors, and chiefly among them was the Aeronca "flying baby carriage." The Aeronca is the power glider which has taken the east by storm, and is owned by Brinton-Bayles Flying Service of Springfield. Both Roscoe Brinton and Lowell Bayles are on deck with their two Wacos in addition to the Aeronca.

A complete stunt program has been arranged, with speed races, bomb dropping, balloon bursting, "dead stick" landings to a mark, formation flying and several secret features which Harland F. Banks, director of the meet, has refused to divulge.

Planes from Boston include George Watkins flying a Kinner engined American Eagle owned by "Flying Joe" Roberts, George MacDonald in a Whirlwind engined Travel Air owned by Wes Temple and Win Young, and Walter Rogers' Davis monoplane.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

Perhaps I have not talked to the representative people of your wonderful city, but those to whom I have spoken about the Tercentenary celebration of the greatest event in American history outside of the Constitution of the United States of America, seem uninterested about it all.

I am a visitor from a Western state and to me this is the richest background that a city could claim. Do the citizens appreciate their wonderful heritage of the influence of those early pioneers in free civil government? If I were a native of Boston it seems to me that I would be boosting everywhere I went, for Bostonians have something to "crow" about.

The Boston Evening American interests me, because in your paper I find so much Tercentenary material, useful and inspiring to a teacher.

Boost for Conductor, But Not for "L" Starter

Editor Boston American:

I have had the pleasure of reading the Boston American for the last 20 years and I think that I owe you a letter of appreciation, now that you have given us the privilege of the letter box.

Perhaps I am a little late, as the saying goes, but it is better late than never Now you suit yourself about printing the above but this is what I want to write you about. Today being a hot day I took a car ride to City Point from Northampton st. I got to City Point and instead of unloading the car at the nearest point at the beach the car kept on going up the line until it hit the rear end of the car loading for Dudley st. I asked a starter of the Boston Elevated why the cars didn't unload before they got to the starting point and this is what he said. "Are you a greenhorn or a wise guy." I explained to him that I expected to see the cars stop before the car started towards Dudley again.

I left City Point about 5 o'clock (p.m.) and I must say the conductor on the car ought to be given a medal for the way he handled the crowd. He had a nice smile for each passenger as he asked them to move up in the car, where the air is nice and cool and he had everybody smiling in spite of the heat. Now just see what difference there is in a conductor and a starter.

He's Still Strong for Earrings for Men

Editor Boston American:

I was glad you were able to use the small writeup I sent you, in regard to "men wearing earrings." My friend who wants to wear earrings says he is sorry that someone doesn't try to encourage men to wearing earrings.

He is a gentleman about 30 years of age, he is athletically inclined and of average intelligence. He says: "I believed I have inherited the likening of earrings from my ancestors. I only wish something could be done to get men to wearing earrings. I hate nose rings."

He told me to thank you for publishing the article, and if you want you can publish this also.

His friend,

Offers Tercentenary Song to Bay State

Editor Boston American:

You will find enclosed a copy of a new song which we have written in honor of the Massachusetts tercentenary. As there seems to be no song that has made a place for itself as a Massachusetts state song, we hope that this one may be considered of sufficient merit to be placed on tercentenary programs. We are pleased to give you permission to reprint the words in the American if you consider them worthy of mention.

The author of the words, Norton T. Hood, is a graduate of Boston University and is a member of the American Legion. The composer, Elenoir C. Hood, is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and is organist of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Belmont. They are the son and daughter of Rev. W. L. Hood of Lexington and are descendants of William Tuttle, who came to Boston in 1635.

The song will be first sung at the Plymouth Congregational Church, Belmont, at the morning service on June 29. Several churches and organizations have already planned to feature it on their programs.

We hope that you will like it.

THE BAY STATE SONG

Words by Norton Tuttle Hood.
Music by Elenoir Caroline Hood.

Let others sing of sunny climes, vast plains and mountains great,
I raise my voice to sing the praise of our beloved Bay State,
Where rollers thunder on the sands of picturesque Cape Cod,
And where the wooded Berkshires lift their leafy tow'rs to God.

Her cities teeming o'er with life,
with many factories,
The quiet charm of little towns
beneath the shelt'ring trees,
Not resting in her glorious past, but ever in the van
With all who strive to bring about the brotherhood of man.

O may she never see the day that she is forced to rue
That blood once red in freedom's cause has turned to craven hue,
To thee we pledge our loyalty, our all, both small and great.
Now let the mighty chorus ring,
God save the old Bay State.

Tide of N. E. Population Away From Big Cities

Editor Boston American:

An examination of preliminary census returns for the New England states indicates a population for the region as a whole of approximately 8,269,633, an increase of 869,724 or 11.7 per cent since the 1920 census, according to figures prepared by the research department of the New England Council.

While this rate of increase is about 2 per cent less than the rate of increase from 1910 to 1920 and 5 per cent less than the rate of increase from 1900 to 1910, a decline in the rate of population growth is to be expected in an area which is the oldest in the point of commercial and industrial development and one of the most densely populated in the country.

The 1930 census preliminary reports complete for four states, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, and estimates for Vermont and Maine, based on partial returns, are as follows:

Maine	768,014	785,000	3.8
New Hampshire	443,083	460,325	3.9
Vermont	352,428	359,000	1.8
Massachusetts	3,852,356	4,364,972	13.3
Rhode Island	604,397	687,523	13.8
Connecticut	1,380,631	1,602,813	16.1
New England	7,400,909	8,269,633	11.7

The Vermont estimate is based upon returns from all but four towns. The Maine estimate is based upon returns from eight out of sixteen counties.

Towns and cities of less than 50,000 inhabitants have accounted for 80 per cent of the population growth in the past 10 years, while the larger cities contributed 20 per cent of the increase compared with 40 per cent for the previous decade, the figures released to date indicate.

Throughout New England the census figures show that persons employed in the larger cities are taking up residences in suburban towns within commuting distance of their places of business. The Boston metropolitan area provides a striking example of this. While Boston proper has gained 35,393 inhabitants in 10 years, a gain of 4.7 per cent, the 42 suburbs within an approximate radius of 15 miles have gained 236,066 in the same time, or 25.2 per cent. Portland, Providence and other large New England cities have experienced the same situation.

Suggests Mothers Might Take Hint From This

Editor Boston American:

The other day as I was walking down my street I heard a little girl calling to her mother: "Mamma, may I cross the street?"

Now, that is a simple thing, but to me it typified a good mother and a good child, both of which are greatly needed in our present scheme of civilization. With speeding automobiles and speeding children, it's a great relief to hear a youngster who pays attention to its parent.

It was a little girl that I heard. I suppose that little boys would be less attentive to the rules their mothers set down. But at the same time that question of the youngster meant a lot.

It meant that she obeyed her mother's orders. It meant that the mother was mindful of the child's safety. It meant that if we had more instances like these it would be a better country for everyone.

Maybe this would be a suggestion for mothers.

Wants Some Sand for L St. Baths

Editor Boston American:

May I suggest an improvement in one of Boston's greatest health giving and most popular resort?

I speak of the L street baths As a daily visitor there I find that the corps of attendents on duty extend the greatest courtesy to the bathers, the water is fine and the bathers enjoy themselves immensely.

But why doesn't the city of Boston dump a few truck loads of fine sand on the beach? If this were done, L street would be second to none as a bathing spot in the country.

Bobby Jones to Get Red Hot Reception

MR. BOSTON turned to Bobby Jones and golf when he popped into the Sporting Department today.

"Bobby Jones will receive a wonderful reception when he arrives in New York from England next week," said the veteran. "He will be greeted as a national hero.

Jack Conway

"From Atlanta, Ga., and Athens, Ga., will come a flock of special trains jammed with Jones' admirers. Then there will be New York's millions who will forget heat waves, heavyweight fights and such things and follow Bobby to City Hall where Jimmy Walker will extend to him the glad hand.

"People everywhere have decided it is about time the country gave Jones a real reception. For years Bobby has been winning all kinds of golf championships. His most recent feat was to step into England and win both the amateur and open golf titles.

"Even the greatest golfing feats of the mighty Walter Hagen look just ordinary when one studies the accomplishments of the youthful Atlanta attorney.

"The sporting world agree that Jones is the most marvelous of all golfers. He didn't leave any grounds for disputing his position by the decisive manner in which he polished off the great array of talent which recently opposed him in England.

"I believe it is proper that brilliant athletes like Jones should receive a warm reception when they return in triumph from foreign shores. It proves to them that America appreciates what they have done.

"Jones has carried himself well wherever he has appeared abroad. He has been a fine American sportsman and like Col. Lindbergh and Admiral Byrd a diplomat without portfolio. He has been an inspiration to every American boy and a credit to every citizen. Let's honor him.

Ouimet First Trail Blazer in Golf

"Francis Ouimet, Boston's own, was the trail blazer in international golf. When a youngster at The Country Club in Brookline he turned back Vardon and Ray, greatest British professionals. He put golf out on the front page of every newspaper in the United States. Jones and the rest have kept it there.

"Golf brings forth sportsmanship of the highest order. Men without character seldom get to the top in the links game.

"Millions of people are playing golf today. There is almost as much interest in an international golf contest as there is in a heavyweight championship bout or a world's series.

"Golf keeps marching forward. Get out your driver and other clubs and join the mighty army which is gaining health and happiness out on the links.

Jack Rothrock Returns to Sox Practice

"I am glad to hear that Jack Rothrock, fastest man in the American League, is again practicing with the Red Sox. He had an ankle broken on April 19 and has not played since. Rothrock expects to be able to take his former place in the Red Sox line-up in a week to ten days.

"Rothrock is a brilliant fielder, dangerous hitter and makes the opposition look slow when it comes to whirling around the bases.

"The Red Sox will be greatly strengthened with the return of Rothrock. He will give the club added punch. And a ball club requires plenty of the old wallop to get anywhere.

Whichone Must Wait to Gain Revenge

"Followers of racing were keenly disappointed when it was announced that Whichone, Harry Payne Whitney's star three-year-old, would not start against Gallant Fox at Aqueduct today. It was announced that Whichone has two three-quarter cracks and must take things easy for a while. Perhaps these famous racers will settle the question of supremacy at the Arlington meeting in Chicago next month.

"Earl Sande, Gallant Fox's jockey, told me recently that Man-o-War was a greater horse than Gallant Fox. Sande knows horseflesh better than any jockey in the world. And how he boots those winners in.

"I know folks who would bet on Sande's mount even if the plug had never won a race before. Those magic hands and feet of Sande have the victory habit.

"What a modest fellow is this Sande. When called upon to make a speech at a sport dinner recently, Earl said, 'I'm just a little stable boy who is trying to get by.'

"And how those who heard Sande's remarks cheered him."

16 CLUBS TO COMPETE AT TECH FIELD

Boston's Y. M. C. A. track and field champions will endeavor to hold their title when they compete with teams from 15 other Y's at Tech Field, today.

Boston will be favored to win but the team from Brooklyn, N. Y., is very strong. Brooklyn will send 32 runners including some noted [illegible] stars and may be able to outpoint the Hub contingent in the competition which will start at [illegible] 15.

Coach Hultgren's boys have trained earnestly and feel that they'll gather enough points to retain the crown.

Capt. Myer Yavner, Alex Reilden, Al Forsberg, Al Morang and [illegible] Powers are all stars of the Boston Y. M. C. A. who should win points. Coach Hultgren is also counting upon John Matukas in the discus throw.

Captain Yavner Seeks Three Championships

Capt. Yavner hopes to win the 100 and 220 as well as the broad jump. [illegible] D'Auria of Brooklyn won both titles a year ago with Yavner second in the 100 and fourth in the furlong. Yavner won the broad jump title and is out to repeat. Harry Clark in the walk and Allen Fiske in the half mile are other Boston hopefuls.

There will be 15 events on the program. Bill Bingham, director of Harvard athletics, will act as referee with Mayor Russell of Cambridge and Governor Frank G. Allen as honorary referees. Governor Allen has donated a fine trophy for which the 16 teams from the United States and Canada will compete.

BRADDOCK DUE IN HUB TODAY

James J. Braddock, Jersey heavyweight, arrives in Boston this morning and trains this afternoon at Arena [illegible] gym in Bowdoin sq. for [illegible] bout with Joe Monte next Wednesday night at Fenway Park under Arena A. C. auspices.

Braddock is in tip top condition. He will train four days for Monte whom he considers one of the toughest foes he has ever faced. Monte is already in training at [illegible] and is boxing with Arthur Flynn, Pat Perkins, Jack Moulton and Tony Shucco.

Monte and Braddock went 10 grueling rounds two years ago in New York, fighting the semi-final to the Sharkey-Risko bout. Monte's inexperience was greatly against him although he took Braddock by surprise in the early rounds and gave him a terrific pounding. Judges ruled it a draw.

Braddock numbers among his victims Tommy Loughran, former light heavyweight king; Tuffy Griffiths, whom he kayoed; Pete Latzo and Jimmy Slattery.

Lettering Bobby Brown of Lowell tackles Jack McCarthy, Roxbury middleweight, in the semi-final.

Six rounders find the following [illegible] matched: Pat Perkins, South Boston, vs. Pat O'Flaherty, South Boston; [illegible], California, vs. Steve Gorman, South Boston; Larry Doyle, California, vs. Danny Regan, Gardner.

Eddie Sullivan, Walpole, meets Tony Sallesa, Watertown, in a four rounder.

'Babe' 11 Games Up on 1927 Record

New York, June 28—Babe Ruth continues to step along well in front of his home run figures for 1927, the year in which he established his record of 60. Ruth hit No. 27 at the Stadium today in the Yanks' 63d game of the current season. Back in 1927 Babe did not hit his 27th until July 8, in the 74th game of that season.

Ehmke Expects to Be in Shape for the Fall

Philadelphia, June 28—Howard Ehmke announced today he will leave in a few days for Camp Tecumseh, on Lake Winnepesaukee in the White Mountains, where he has accepted a position as camp director. He will be in charge of several hundred boys at the same camp he attended as a youth. Ehmke will try to get his arm in shape there during the Summer months and expects to stage a "come back" in the Fall.

HUB HOPE IN DISCUS THROW AT Y.M.C.A. MEET

JOHN MATUKAS is expected to help the Boston Y. M. C. A. track team retain its title by winning the discus throw in the second annual International Y track and field carnival at Tech Field this afternoon. Matukas can throw the iron platter over 120 feet. Coach Hultgren believes that his discus heaver will win.

Simmons Ties Cochrane for Batting Lead

Chicago, June 28 (AP)—Al Simmons of the Philadelphia Athletics battered his way into a first place tie with his teammate, Mickey Cochrane, in the American League [illegible] ing the tenth week, unofficial averages including Wednesday's games disclose.

While Cochrane slipped [illegible] points, Simmons got 14 hits in [illegible] chances and boosted his average 10 points to .396, equalling Cochrane's. Sam Rice of the Washington Senators was seven points behind with a .389 mark while Lou Gehrig of the Yankees ranked next with .387. Other leaders were Dickey, New York, .378; Ruth, New York, .376; Hodapp, Cleveland, .372; Combs, New York, .366; Foxx, Philadelphia, .355 and McManus, Detroit, .352.

In nine out of a possible 12 fields the Yankees and Athletics dominated team and individual races in the American League.

The Yankees increased their hold on the team batting lead during the period the unofficial statistics reveal, hiking their average from .314 to .317. The A's led in fielding with a .976 average. Babe Ruth topped them all by leaderships in four fields with 79 runs for a big total of 176 bases, 26 home runs and 70 runs batted in. Earl Combs led in triples with 11 while the four leading pitchers were Yankees and Athletics. The only fields where they were topped were in stolen bases where Rice still led with 12, in hits in which Hodapp of Cleveland led with 91 and in doubles, McManus of Detroit had the most doubles—21.

Cardinal Recruit Tops National Batsmen

Two recruit outfielders of the St. Louis Cardinals reached the mark of 100 times at bat, which is the current mark of a regular player in the National League last week and promptly took places among the batting leaders. In the averages issued today, which include Wednesday's games, George Fisher displaced Chuck Klein of the Phillies from first place, assuming the lead with an average of [illegible] while Klein went to second with [illegible]. George Watkins, with a [illegible] mark for an even 100 times at bat, landed in 10th place.

Dick Langmaid Most Feared Entry in Tourney

Due to his 15-stroke handicap plus the fact that he has been in the low 80's every round, Dick [illegible] or Moran can match the game Langmaid is playing on a scratch basis and the former must give Dick four strokes and the latter five. But, on the other hand, Allen has five strokes coming to him [illegible] receive four.

The finals will be played this afternoon.

ALLISON TO FACE COCHET IN QUARTER-FINALS OF WIMBLEDON SINGLES

By T. C. WATSON

Wimbledon, Eng., Jan. 28—The royal accent of the House of Windsor was impressed on Wimbledon's famous center court when the arrival of King George and Queen Mary coincided with the ending of the second set of the day's star match between Gregory Mangin and H. W. Austin, the young British hope, for the men's tennis singles crown.

The Newark, N. J., youth then proceeded to put a ruthless American cachet on the game and match and become one of the three invaders from across the Atlantic who passed into the quarter-finals which will be played today.

All in all, it was another American day in the two weeks' [illegible] although England was able to celebrate the first appearance of King George at Wimbledon since 1928 [illegible] was [illegible]

What America celebrated, on the other hand, was a total of nine victories out of 12 matches in which American men [illegible]

Cochet Lone European in Quarter-Finals

Johnny Doeg, of Santa Monica, Cal., Wilmer Allison, of San Antonio, Tex., and Mangin were the three Americans who lifted [illegible] into the quarter finals, while in the other singles match, the victor was the irresistible Henri Cochet [illegible] who will oppose Allison today.

Mangin defeated Austin, [illegible] while Doeg was [illegible]

[illegible] defeated [illegible] 6—3, 6—3, 6—1. Allison disposed of Patrick Hughes, England, 4—6, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3, rallying after the first set.

Big Bill Tilden, Tilden-esque in his service aces and his marvelous placements, pulled his partner, Hans Timmer, the southpaw champion of the Netherlands, out of a losing match into victory over Pierre Landry and Grandguillot, of France, after the American-Dutch pair had been losing 1 to 2 in sets. Tilden's play tied the match and won it in five sets, 8—6, 4—6, 4—6, 6—1, 6—4.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody continued her giant strides toward the ultimate defense of her crown by [illegible] Miss M. [illegible] of Holland, 6—0, 6—1, in a mechanically perfect [illegible]. Helen Jacobs, America's other California bloom, trounced Mrs. Lust, of England, by the same easy score, 6—0, 6—1.

America was less fortunate in the mixed doubles when A. J. Willard, England, and Mlle. S. Payot, Switzerland, defeated Berkeley Bell, United States, and Molly Greef, England, 3—6, 6—2, 6—3, and P. D. B. Spence of South Africa, playing with his fiancee, Miss Betty Nuthall, England, turned in a win over George Lott and Helen Jacobs, United States, 1—6, 7—5, 6—2.

Sarah Palfrey, Paired With Mangin, Wins

Mangin and Sally Palfrey, United States, triumphed over W. A. Collins and Gwen Sterry, a British pair, 6—2, 6—3, while Elizabeth Ryan, paired with Jack Crawford, Australia, defeated O. G. N. Turnbull and Mrs. H[illegible] of England, 6—3, 6—3. Allison partnered with Edith Cross, United States, won from G. R. Sherwell and Violet Montgomery, England, 2—6, 6—4, 6—2.

In the women's doubles Miss Mianne Palfrey, sister of Sally, paired with Cecile Aussem, German champion, lost in three sets to a British combination, Mrs. J. L. Colgate and Miss C. Tyrell, 6—3, 6—3, 7—5.

Mangin, hailed here as Tilden's successor, appeared stronger than ever in the last set when he completely swept Austin off his feet after they had already played 130 minutes of the most strenuous sort of tennis. It was Mangin's severest test to date, and he stood the ordeal like a giant.

Doeg played his strongest game [illegible] winning in a [illegible] manner in three sets. [illegible] appeared lackadaisical and unimpressive, but this match justified his high ranking. The West Coaster's brilliant service was untakeable and he volleyed and smashed like a champion. His ground shots, though, are still [illegible]

Cochet Forced to Extra Sets to Win

Cochet was forced into extra sets for the third time in the tournament although he appeared better than [illegible] a week needing [illegible] to vanquish the Britisher, H. K. Lester.

Allison survived easily after the loss of the first set to Hughes, but [illegible] can be in a [illegible]

The metropolitan players won four of the six singles and one of the three doubles. Boston was eliminated when its doubles team of [illegible] Brooks [illegible] and Henry [illegible] bowed to [illegible] W. Feibleman [illegible] Griffin, 6—3, 9—7, after the two teams were tied at four [illegible]

Boston's singles victories were [illegible] Richard Murphy and [illegible] Jr. over J. Gil[illegible] and [illegible] W. Feibleman, respectively.

Chances of Red Sox Escaping Cellar Appear Bright

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

INJURED MEN WILL SOON BE FIT TO PLAY

By JOE CASHMAN

The Red Sox are in the cellar with the lowest percentage of any big league team on this last Saturday in June, and it is the consensus of the experts that they will finish at the bottom.

Yet a close study of the performance of the team this season shews that it is not nearly as weak as the figures indicate and has better than an even chance of escaping the basement for the first time since 1924.

The local American League entry is not a great club, by a long shot, but, except for two weeks in May, it has exceeded the expectations of its greatest admirers to date and would be hailed as one of the season's sensations today if it hadn't suffered those 14 defeats in a row at the hands of Washington, Philadelphia and New York.

For, up to the time the losing streak started the Wagners had won 12 out of 28 games and since breaking it they have split even in 24 starts.

Slump Kept Sox Out of Fifth Place

In other words the club that was an almost unanimous choice in preseason dope to be a tail ender from the start to the finish of the campaign, has played close to .500 ball thus far, outside of that one slump.

If they could have split even in those 14 games they would be right on the heels of the fourth place Cleveland Indians at this writing. If they could have won but five of those tilts, they would be safe in fifth place.

Not yet this season have the natives been at full strength. Jack Rothrock has been out since April 19. Ed Morris has been more or less useless all year. Bobby Reeves has been on the injured list most of the way. Bill Regan has played only about half the games.

All these players are nearly ready to start playing regularly again. When they are, the Sox will be much stronger than they have been at any time in the past and, barring further injuries and another long losing streak, which is unlikely, ought to be able to win enough games before the curtain falls to finish well out of the basement.

They have 90 more games to play. Winning 40 of them promises to turn the trick. With several regulars incapacitated they have maintained a faster gait than that since the start, except during that bad fortnight, so there is every reason to believe that they will succeed.

Of course, the pitching must stand up. What success the team has had up to now has been due entirely to the pitchers and what success it may gain in the future will be due to them also as the team has very little punch and can't develop one this season.

Manager Heinie Wagner has often been criticized because of the way he handles his pitchers. He will not work his regulars out of turn even to protect leads in late innings.

His critics point out that Connie Mack doesn't hesitate to use his ace, "Lefty" Grove, to save games for the champions and that other pilots use their best pitchers to finish up games.

Wagner Wise in Refusing to Overwork Pitchers

That's true and the Sox might have a few more games to their credit than they have at this writing if Wagner would do the same thing, but the Sox boss can't afford to do it and will probably fare better in the long run because of his refusal to listen to his critics.

He has only three winning fingers, Gaston, MacFayden and Russell. They must stand every fourth day, which is really too often for the last two named. And when they pitch they have to pitch every minute of the way. Their mates never make the going easy for them.

If they had to try to save games in addition, the chances are that they wouldn't be able to win their regular starts as often as they do and the team would be hopeless.

Pitching is all Wagner has and he must protect it.

It is a different proposition on strong clubs. If one or two star hurlers of the Athletics, Yanks or Senators tires as a result of working out of turn, it isn't very serious.

You or we could pitch for those clubs and have a chance of winning with their attacks.

Only the very strongest clubs can get away with it, however.

Cleveland, far from weak, tried the stunt at the start of the season. Either Ferrell or Hudlin were in the box almost every day. The team went great as long as the flingers stood up under the punishment, but when the two mound stars tired, the outfit found itself without a winning pitcher and collapsed. The Sox have played better ball than the Indians during the past three weeks.

Wagner, like all managers makes mistakes, but he isn't making one by refusing to work his few good pitchers out of turn.

And everything considered, he has done a first-class job piloting the Sox this season.

NO CREWS WILL QUIT REGATTA

New York, June 28 (INS)—Denial that Washington, Wisconsin and possibly other crews would not race again in the intercollegiate rowing regatta at Poughkeepsie over the Hudson was made today. Rumors had been circulated that some colleges whose shells were caught in a heavy roll when a boat was permitted to approach too close to the racing crews Thursday, intended to withdraw.

Washington and Wisconsin officials said they would be represented again next year and said while the incident was unfortunate, officials of the regatta and members of other crews were not to blame.

Richard Harris, 21-year-old coxswain, was elected captain of the Washington crew for 1931 at a dinner given at Poughkeepsie for the Huskies.

Coach Mike Murphy and his Wisconsin crew were the guests at a dinner here at the Yale Club given by New York Alumni of Wisconsin.

Diamond Pick-Ups

Bob Quinn can't be superstitious. All season the Sox and Braves have played their worst ball on Sunday afternoons, yet the Fenway "prexy" has listed Friday's postponement with the Chicago White Sox to be played off as part of a twin-bill at the Wigwam tomorrow.

Jimmy Welsh, popular Braves outfielder, is on the injured list again, having caught his finger in a taxi door in Cincinnati. That is nothing new for the Tribal fly chaser. He has been on the list as much as he has been off of it ever since breaking into the big show. The first year he was with the Tribe he hurt his ankle. When he went to the Giants, he sprained his side. He was out of the game several weeks this season with a bad knee. Few players have been as unfortunate.

Cincinnati and St. Louis furnish proof that Boston is still one of the best of the country's ball towns. The Reds are constantly postponing games in order to play week-end doubleheaders and the Cards are doing the same thing. It is the only way either club can attract enough cash customers to pay expenses. Boston has had tail-end clubs for years but neither local team has yet been forced to manufacture twin bills.

Tris Speaker has resigned as manager of the Newark club. He knows plenty of baseball but never met with success as a manager, except in 1920, when he led the Cleveland Indians to the pennant. So his days as a pilot and probably as a baseball figure appear to be over unless he is offered and accepts a job as a coach on some club.

Dolly Stark resigned as a National League umpire several weeks ago and "Death Valley Jim" Scott was appointed to fill the vacancy. No announcement has ever been made that Stark changed his mind and rejoined the staff, but box scores of Western games carry his name daily.

The Red Sox, like the Chicago Cubs, have a pitcher who works in batting practice daily but never gets into a game. He is Frank Bushey, a big right-hander from Kansas, whom the Wagners secured two years ago and farmed out twice to Pittsfield.

PRINCETON AND KENT TO ROW

Henley on Thames, Eng. (AP)—The Royal regatta, starting July 2 and lasting four days, will be more of an international event this year than ever before.

Two American crews, one from Princeton University and one from the Kent school, are competing. There also will be a crew from the Berlin Rudder club, the first German crew seen at Henley for 16 years.

A crew from South America will take part in the regatta for the first time, the Club Canottiera Italiana Galerie of Buenos Aires having entered for the Thames Challenge Cup. Delft University of Holland also will be represented.

A German, J. Boezelin of the Berlin Rudder club has entered for the diamond sculls and the two Canadian scullers, J. Wright Jr., who won last year and J. S. Guest will be seen on the river again.

Participation of the Germans in the river classic was made possible through the renewal of the agreement between the Henley Committee and the German Rowing Association which was canceled during the war.

Max Promises Return Bout as He Sails for Home

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, June 28—Max Schmeling, the Herr prize fighter, left the land of the free at midnight last night on the Bremen, bound for Europe and the heavyweight championship of the world left with him.

He is coming back before the end of the summer, they say, but whether the title was coming with him remained a moot point, although the Herr Schmeling was at some pains to file a demurrer against a current innuendo. This purported to believe that he thus was taking plenty of prairie, which translated from the vulgarian, means a run-out.

The Herr Schmeling disagreed with this version. He did more. He said that if there was no prize fight with Sharkey in September it wouldn't be because he was unwilling to fight. He, it seems, wants to do a lot of things for the land of the free. Free? He didn't disagree with that version. It even gave him the heavyweight championship for nothing.

"I make only one promise to the American public," said he, just before sailing. "The promise I make is that another fight with Sharkey will be held in September, if the public and Sharkey are willing. I do nothing to interfere with that plan. I do everything I can to bring it about. But I must be protected against trouble, and until the promoters give me assurance of this the fight can't go on. I hope Manager Jacobs will be able to straighten this matter out while I am at home, so that I can come back ready to fight. My victory was questioned because of Sharkey's foul. That is as it should be. I want America to know that I am not any more satisfied with this than it is."

Sharkey-Schmeling Return Is Far Off

Meantime, it appears that the second Sharkey-Schmeling fight is no nearer fulfillment than it was the morning after the original meeting, at which time it was further away than a wild pitch. Schmeling and his manager, the Herr Jake, who mastered his German in ten simple lessons at the corner delicatessen, accepted Sharkey's defi for another fight.

As a matter of fact, they are still trying to meet the first condition with so little success that they haven't even met the man who could make it possible, the Herr Arthur Bulow. The latter seems to be a gentleman who keeps his own counsel and his appointments as seldom as possible, for the Garden people have been known to sit around for hours waiting for the man to break an engagement.

Unless they get his name on a certain document, the fight can't go on; so maybe he is really the people's friend, after all.

Just to keep the record straight the Herr Bulow is Schmeling's manager, once removed. Once was enough.

Anyhow, I understand the German has so little faith in the Sharkey arrangements that, although he promises to be back ready to fight early in August, he considering the possibilities of a meeting with Tom Heeney in Germany before the close of the outdoor season. If he goes with Honest Tom, there won't be any possibilities. There will be probabilities. They call him Honest Tom because he is so dependable.

City Offers to Lay Out Greens

Knoxville, Tenn. (AP)—In the future many local golfers will escape the discomfiture of seeing a well driven golf game go to pieces on the greens.

The municipal government, no less, has volunteered to see to it. The city recreation department offers to lay out putting greens on any private lawn in town.

BOBBY JONES IS NERVOUS

London, June 28—Bobby Jones, the cool-headed, machine-like golfer who added the British amateur and open championships to his already imposing list of golf titles, is nervous.

He admitted as much when he left Waterloo station to board the steamer Europa today.

"I think New York's civic reception is just great, but I am a little nervous."

Cyril Tolley, British golf star, who is going to the United States to compete in the open and amateur championships, joined Bobby and Mrs. Jones.

The departure was unostentatious.

Two wooden cases, marked fragile, were put aboard the ship. As Bobby had said it was bad luck to take the championship cups with him, he declined to admit that the cases contained the trophies.

Jones Forgets Bag of Winning Clubs

The clubs with which Robert Tye Jones, Jr., lifted the British amateur and open championships were not with the American golfing ace today as he headed toward America on board the North German Lloyd liner Europa.

The clubs with which the Atlanta golf wizard knocked the white pellet through the hazards of St. Andrews and the Royal Liverpool courses were on the Cunard liner Aquitania in the care of a friend.

Jones, in the excitement of leaving for the United States on the Europa, forgot them and had them rushed to the Europa. However, the clubs missed the sailing of the Europa by 10 minutes.

Rush of Lady Fans Too Much for Cubs

Chicago, June 28—The ladies have just about forced William Veeck, President of the Cubs, to toss up his hands. It is a very great hobby of William Wrigley Jr., owner of the Cubs, to have at least one Ladies Day a week at Wrigley Field.

The rush for tickets and entrance to the park, however, became so great that Veeck, after a lot of thought, finally decided to dole out the free pasteboards several days ahead of time. Instead, Wrigley Field had two rushes a week, one to get the tickets and one to get into the park.

So Veeck has decided to revert to the old system and admit the fanettes without tickets each Friday.

Dorchester Faces Cambridge Sox

Cambridge White Sox, considered the strongest semi-pro nine in the University City, will cross bats with the well-known Dorchester A. A., champions of the Dorchester Twi League, at Russell Field, Cambridge, tomorrow.

Both nines are famous for their heavy batters, and a battle royal should result. The Dorchester nine has an enviable record, which includes wins over Dorchester Twi team and Somerville Cubs, and is extremely anxious to pin a defeat on the White Sox. An odd coincidence of the game is that the rival managers, Bill Flynn of Cambridge and Fred Routhier of Dorchester, are manager and trainer respectively of the Boston Hockey Club.

BRAVES LOSE TO REDS IN NINTH, 7-6

Cincinnati, O., June 28—After staging a five-run rally in the eighth inning to tie the score, the Boston Braves weakened in the ninth and dropped the second contest of their series with the Reds by a score of 7 to 6.

A pass to Walker, followed by singles by Meusel and Kelley, resulted in the winning marker.

Kelley was the big noise in the natives' attack, hitting a home run with a mate on first in the seventh, as well as knocking in the winning run.

Benny Frey, who beat the Tribe twice previously this season, hurled great ball until the eighth, when he retired in favor of Larry Benton, who stopped the enemy's drive and received credit for the victory.

Harry "Socks" Seibold started for the Braves in the hope of annexing his tenth win of the season. He didn't get it, but he did escape defeat as Ed "Lefty" Brandt allowed the winning run and was charged with the loss.

Young Buster Chatham, new Hub third sacker, continued his great hitting, getting a double and two singles in four times up, to lead his mates with the stick.

Dunlap Battles Moller in College Golf Final Today

FORMER IS FAVORITE TO WIN

Oakmont, Pa., June 28—Although the six Greater Boston qualifiers have all been eliminated, New Englanders are still interested in the intercollegiate golf championship, for George T. Dunlap of Princeton, who is playing Larry Moller of Notre Dame for the title in the finals, here today, summers at Maplewood, N. H.

Despite the unfairness of the draw, the championship has run true, for at the close of the 36-hole qualifying round, Dunlap and Moller were tied with 153.

Moller started his drive to the finals with a 3 and 2 victory over George McWilliam of Princeton and in the second round he accounted for Fred Brand, Jr. of Penn State by a 4 and 3 margin. In the 36-hole quarter finals, Moller and Capt. "Bill" Forrest of Yale staged a battle, which went to the 35th hole before the South Bender won the verdict.

Finlay Puts Up Great Fight in Semifinal

Phil Finlay, the Harvard leader, made a courageous bid to eliminate Moller. The Harvard and Notre Dame players fought for 37 holes, at which point Finlay missed a four-footer for a half after Moller had "canned" a nice putt for a birdie four.

George Dunlap stepped through a fast field to reach the finals. He opened with a 2 and 1 win over Albert Brodeck of Pennsylvania and then put out the long-hitting Mac Burnett, from the University of Texas, by a score of 5 and 4. Sam Parks of the University of Pittsburgh was the Little Princetonian's third victim and then Dunlap ran rough-shod over Winston Fuller of the University of Southern California, winning by the largest margin of the championship, 8 and 7.

Moller will not want for supporters today, but to those who have followed Dunlap over a period of years the Princeton boy has the call. As Dunlap has played 131 holes and Moller 130 since the start of this championship, physical condition will play an important role today.

Dunlap is a frail youngster weighing about 120, while Moller is somewhat more rugged and heavier.

For years Dunlap has been playing a fine brand of golf. He has been con[illegible] in tournaments at Pinehurst during winter pilgrimages to the Carolinas and he has [illegible] player [illegible] during [illegible].

There [illegible] is a very [illegible] an exception[illegible].

McWilliam, Princeton; Brand, Penn State; Forrest, Yale, and Finlay, Harvard, all tried and at times succeeded to out hit Moller, but they all started to press in order to get out with the boy from South Bend [illegible] loss of timing and eventually defeat.

Dunlap Will Not Fear Notre Dame Star

Dunlap is fortified with too much championship experience to attempt to outhit or even be affected by Moller's distance from the tees. Dunlap played one of his best rounds against MacBurnett, who is a be-hitter in any company.

Dunlap and Moller are expected to engage in one of the most better tilts of the week. If Dunlap's stamina does not desert him, he has better than an [illegible] of winning [illegible] title.

In [illegible] to [illegible] qualify[illegible] champion as they tied for the honor.

Schaaf to Meet Argonne Victor

Ernie Schaaf, hard-hitting Hub sailor who recently conquered Tommy Loughran, has practically consented to step into the ring to meet the winner of the heavyweight bout between Riccardo Bertazzolo, Italian giant, and Tom Heeney, New Zealand blacksmith, who clash at Mechanics Building Monday night, July 7.

Following a conference between Eddie Mack and Schaaf, the latter expressed his eagerness of accepting one more ring engagement before he meets Jimmy Maloney in the fall and he is agreeable to meeting either Bertazzolo or Heeney.

Although this bout will mark Bertazzolo's first appearance in the ring since he broke his hand in his last bout with Jimmy Maloney, the Italian is anticipating a victory. He is training at Sharon Gardens with Jack Gagnon and Jimmy Mendez.

Mack clinched an outstanding lightweight bout for the eight round semifinal, when Eddie Reilly of New York agreed to return here to meet Tommy Rawson, Jr., of East Boston. Reilly was the hit of a recent show here and in his last start defeated Babe Herman. This bout looms up as a feature in itself.

BEATEN AT THE 37TH

PHILLIPS FINLAY, Harvard golf star, who was beaten in the semifinal round of the intercollegiate championship tournament at Oakmont by Lawrence Moller of Notre Dame after a bitter 37-hole struggle. The Crimson favorite squared the match at the 36th, after he had been trapped, but lost on the extra hole when he missed a four-foot putt.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Horton Smith and Leo Deigel, who arrived in New York yesterday from England, will play an 18-hole exhibition match against Fred J. Wright, Albemarle, the Massachusetts amateur champion and Jesse P. Guilford, a former national amateur and Massachusetts open titleholder at the Pine Brook Valley Country Club tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

President David Stoneman of the Pine Brook Valley Country Club has offered $100 to the player who breaks the present course record of 70, which was made by Walter Hagen and Archie Compston. In the event of either Guilford or Wright setting up a new record, they will receive the equivalent [illegible].

Horton S[illegible] [illegible] with W[illegible] that tomorrow in New England, far as exhibitions are concerned. However, he has shown his wares in these parts, especially at Wollaston, where he walked off with the Massachusetts open title two years ago.

At a meeting of the handicap committee of the Massachusetts Golf Association, a score of golfers were made eligible for the State amateur championship. In some cases the reductions were deserving, but in others—but why dwell on such a touchy subject?

After the siege of golf he has played this week at Salem, it will be to Clark Hodder's advantage to take a rest for about ten days before the State amateur championship. If Hodder takes the same brand of shots with him to Salem next month that he had at his command during the four-ball invitation he will be unbeatable.

The Jack Winslow of Marlboro who was given a seven handicap by the M. G. A., is Worcester Jack who was one of the leading golfers in the Heart of the Commonwealth a few years ago. Welcome back to the fold Jack.

Herbert Hicks of Salem is all washed up as far as playing in any more tournaments which extend over a week. It is too much of a mental and physical strain on a golfer who seldom plays more often than once or twice a week. Hicks and his pardner, Karl Mosser, went through to the quarter finals of the Salem four ball invitation, despite the fact that Hicks was noticeably under-handicapped.

Phillips Finlay made a great bid to reach the finals of the Intercollegiates at Oakmont. He took Larry Moller to the 37th hole but a slip on a four-footer cost Phil his chance to meet George T. Dunlap today in the finals.

However, Dunlap['s] [illegible] from the top of the hill to the 9th green at Salem was one of the best shots of the entire tournament. The ball was hit beautiful and was on the pin all the way, hitting on and running to within four feet of the cup. And, he dropped the putt for a birdie.

Horton Smith and Leo Diegel are playing an exhibition match in Rochester, N. Y., today and will not arrive here until noon tomorrow for the match with Wright and Guilford at Pine Brook Valley. They will be accompanied by the globe-trotting Bob Harlow, golf's greatest impressario.

The N. E. P. G. O. will stage an amateur-pro tournament at the South Shore Country Club on Monday.

Allen Knocks Out Roberts in the Fifth

Salem, June 28—Harrison Allen of Gloucester knocked out K. O. Roberts of Fall River in the fifth round of their bout here.

In the semi-final bout George Ostrow, ex-112-pound amateur champion, stopped Smoke Silver of Taunton in one round. Napoleon Bonaparte, Montreal, beat Rob Neary, Lowell, in six rounds. Sammy Caro, Boston, knocked out Colby Benson in the sixth round. Fred Griffin, Chelsea, won over Johnny Samas, Bermuda, in six rounds.

BIKE STARS IN HOUR RACE AT OVAL TONIGHT

Franco Georgetti, American motor-paced champion, will compete in the hour contest at the Revere Cycle Track tonight against Frankie Keenan, George Chapman, Vic DeBates and Franz Dueiberg.

Georgetti has always been subjected to hoots and jeers, because he never seemed to ride his best at the beach oval. The title holder claims he feared injuries on the old "bumpy" surface but will ride his fastest on the new track.

In fact, the Italian feels so sure of winning tonight that he believes he will set a new hour record. Georgetti thinks he can tote at least 47 miles in the hour.

Tonight's race is a crucial one for Keenan. If he wins or finishes second, he will be offered a contract to ride in the title series. But if he lags behind, he will have to climb to the top all over again.

Chappie, after riding at Revere once, has come through with the statement that he believes the record can be broken and he will be the one to break it. With Chappie and Georgetti feeling that way, something is liable to happen tonight.

Dueiberg is flying like the wind in New York and Newark, and even the young DeBates is having remarkable success. It is doubtful if Nat Butler could sign up a faster field than that which will go after a new record tonight.

A five-mile open and other races for amateurs and pros will complete the card, which, Butler believes, is the strongest he has offered in many, many months.

IMPERIAL AIR FINALLY WINS

Aqueduct, N. Y., June 28—Imperial Air loped home with the do re mi in the Hindoo Handicap and thereby proved that the day of miracles is not at an end. All season Imperial Air has been to the races but never could get the brass ring. His trainer, Alex Gordon, then rested him up, and his victory demonstrates that his tactics were correct.

He was in at the light burden of 104 pounds and that helped him in the final scurry. After Panuco tired at the turn for home, the field closed in and swung into the last line close together. Once they straightened out Little Hebert started hustling Imperial Air along. At the eighth pole he forced to the front. Once in the lead the race was over.

Charon made a determined bid all the way but the best he could do was to get second money. Captain Hook was an easy th[ird].

In your short game the ball must be projected more like a bullet or an arrow. It must hold its line [illegible] the pin all the way as [illegible] the swing is [illegible] [illegible] al [illegible] a [illegible] more [illegible] line for the pin ma[y] in [illegible] trouble that costs one or more strokes. To keep the pitched ball straight your most certain method is to let your wrists roll through the ball as the blade strokes the ball away and to repress all hitting instinct as you swing. Now these things are hard to do, very hard. First the rolling of your wrists or forearms through, must be with a perfect timing of the blade against the ball, and the roll must be a natural one—not a forced action. Swing your club in practice and, just as the blade swings through you will note that your forearms must roll forward or your body must move that way—that is, your body is not compelled to move forward, but its tendency is to do so. Rolling through extends your reach, which is desirable. Try it, letting the action be smooth and natural.

Does your game average 80-90? Do you want to get it near par? Chester Horton has just prepared a new monograph which should help any player lower his average by a good margin, especially the 80-90 player. To receive it send stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Sports Editor, this newspaper, and ask for "Helping 80-90 Averages."

SCHMELING AND SHARKEY TO BOX AGAIN IN SEPT.

New York, June 28—After 10 days of furious negotiations, a return match between Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey was practically assured today.

Arthur Bulow, Schmeling's discarded manager, has finally accepted terms.

Frank Bruen, vice-president of Madison Square Garden said he believes contracts will be signed with managers of both fighters by next Tuesday. The date will be September 18 or 25, at the Yankee Stadium.

"Conditions have taken a great change for the better in the past 24 hours. I almost gave up hope yesterday, but today's developments indicate that everything will be straightened out within the next few hours," said Bruen.

Under the plan agreed upon by Bruen and Bulow the latter will be guaranteed 26 per cent of Schmeling's purse, which Jack Sharkey has agreed to pay out of his end. Schmeling will receive [illegible] per cent, and Sharkey takes 1[illegible] per cent of the net proceeds.

Of the 26 per cent of 37½ per cent, only 20 per cent will go to Bulow. He turned over the other 6 per cent to Charlie Rose, a Broadway manager. However Bulow is contesting Rose's right to anything and this dispute held up an agreement. Bulow now agrees to relinquish all claims on Schmeling in return for the 26 per cent and will settle his argument with Rose in court.

Sharkey will be fighting for his training expenses. If [illegible] receipts are $600,000, which Bruen expects, Schmeling's 37½ per cent will amount to $225,000. On this basis Bulow's 26 per cent will amount to $58,500. Sharkey's end [illegible] per cent will be $75,000.

Deduct Bulow's $58,500 from Sharkey's $75,000 leaves $16,500, which would be barely enough to cover training expenses.

Star 'Pures' Enter Somerville Show

According to Dick Merrick, who is handling the entries for the City Employes' A. A. open air amateur boxing tournament, to be staged on Tuesday evening at Dilboy Field, West Somerville, there will be plenty of action for those who take in this affair. He is in receipt of entries from the top-notchers in the 112, 135, 175 and heavyweight classes.

While the two latter classes, especially the 175, are expected to produce the real action, the 112-pound class, with James Rand, Lowell; Nadeau Pesosi, Haverhill; William Brennan, Hingham, John Lynch, Somerville; Mike Modica, East Boston, and Clarence Nadeau, Cambridge, entered should provide plenty of entertainment.

In addition to the above classes there will be the 160-pound, which is reserved for novices.

Entries for this tournament should be forwarded to Dick Merrick, 70 Craigie st., Somerville.

never have happened had a simple English girl been able to have—I mean do her bit, in France," declaims Tosh. "For five months she has labored unceasingly. Admit it, all of you. Never has driver been so worked up. She could have started off in top on any frosty night on the self-starter. To no purpose. My sisters, I ask you, is it her fault there are no stray bits in the area? Despairing, bursting with love."

Tosh pauses drunk[illegible],

We yell with joy.

—"the wench is forced back to England. In the face of this, does France deserve her reputation? I say no. Does France merit the pornographic snigger the very mention of her name earns from those who have never crossed the Channel?"

"No!" we shout, "no, no."

"I agree. B. F. has killed that illusion for ever. So she returns to London where, judging by a rumor that a certain hotel is proposing to erect a memorial tablet to the brave Englishwomen who have fallen there during these early days of the War, one feels she will do her bit not once, but many times. Of such stuff are the women of England made. The pioneer spirit that populates our colonies. As Mahomet had to go to the mountain that refused to come to him, so does The B. "Oh, Gawd!" from Tosh, sotto voce.

"But I feel I have done my bit and rest assured I'll do it in England as Tosh says."

"Unaccustomed as I am to public speaking," murmurs Tosh.

"Go to sleep," shouts a voice.

"I say, Skinny and Smithy haven't made speeches."

"May you always be able to tell mother everything you do, B. F. Chin-chin." I lift my cup hastily. I detest making speeches.

"Now, Skinny," insists the B. F.

Tosh deliberately withdraws from the party by turning her back and opening a [illegible]. The insult is deliberate, as deliberate as earlier when she refused to sample Skinny's potted meat. Skinny ignored the first slight, but now, possibly owing to the unaccustomed vin rouge, she sits up and stares in a hostile fashion at Tosh's back. I feel uneasy.

"Let's all go to sleep," I suggest.

"Yes," from outside.

"No. Skinny must make a speech first," insists The B. F.

Tosh lights a cigarette and begins to read.

"Go on, Skinny."

"No, Tosh doesn't want me to," replies Skinny, nastily. "She resents me being here at all. Pity I'm in the damned room, isn't it?"

"Shut up, Skinny, don't be an ass."

"I won't shut up. Why should I? I've as much right here. I can speak as well as her. This is my room as well as Tosh's, isn't it?"

"Oh, for God's sake," mutters Tosh.

DARTMOUTH, STANFORD TO ENTER CREWS

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 28—Welcomed reports that Stanford and Dartmouth may send crews to the Hudson next year, served as added stimulus to the general excitement at Poughkeepsie following Cornell's long-awaited victory.

In the absence of official confirmation Washington adherents claimed "good authority" for heralding Stanford's return after an absence of 16 years.

Rowing already is officially approved at Dartmouth, and it was believed that an invitation from the Intercollegiate Rowing Association would suffice to insure the presence of the Green at Poughkeepsie.

By an odd coincidence Stanford's reported readiness to return comes at a time when its Poughkeepsie conqueror of 1915 has just resumed the ascendency that it last held on that occasion. Cornell was first, Stanford second in 1915, but these two have never met on the Hudson since then.

All but Two of Cornell Crew to Return in 1931

If Stanford comes back, it will find the pace quickened, the field larger. Nine crews raced in Thursday's varsity event, and there may be 11 a year hence. Stanford, virtually a newcomer after absenting itself for 16 years, could not be expected to step forth as an immediate threat to Cornell, but there is little question that the Ithacans will continue along their restored prestige.

Of the eight sweepswingers that comprised the Reds' winning varsity, only two will be lost to Coach Jim Wray when practice begins next year. The absentees will be Butler, No. 2, and Scott, No. 7, both of whom have graduated. Half of the remainder are entering their senior year, and the other half the junior year, a fact which makes it apparent that Wray has instituted a winning system. He will have experienced varsity material for the next two years at least.

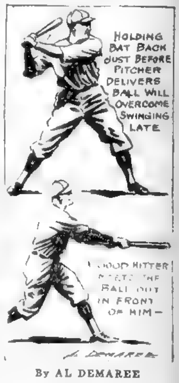
Big League BASEBALL

Meeting Ball Squarely



HOLDING BAT BACK JUST BEFORE PITCHER DELIVERS BALL WILL OVERCOME SWINGING LATE A GOOD HITTER MEETS THE BALL OUT IN FRONT OF HIM—
A. DEMAREE

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

"A good hitter always hits the ball out in front of him," was John McGraw's advice on batting to every young ball player joining the New York Giants.

A batter who never quite gets his bat around on a fast ball and is continually swinging late is never a dangerous hitter. He certainly is never a long hitter.

If you are having trouble in getting your bat around and meeting the ball out in front of you, try holding your bat back, cocked and ready, just before the pitcher delivers the ball.

Many batters fall into the bad habit of nervously swinging their bat back and forth at the plate and the result is that the pitcher is pitching to them "between the swings." Half of the time their bat is in front of them when the ball is coming towards them and they cannot get it back and swing before it arrives. The result is they are never timing the ball and never meeting it squarely.

Keep your bat back and you will find you will hit harder and longer drives and can pull a fast ball more successfully.

Raquel Plays the Ponies on Shipboard and Wins a Fat Roll

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Borrowing four hundred dollars from Jack Farrell, a young engineer, Raquel Rojos flees from her father's home in the Arizona desert to New York, where Farrell is to join her later and marry her. But she does not wait for him. Her exotic beauty has attracted the attention of Alphonse Courbet, a famous fashion expert, who engages her as a model. Raquel sails for Paris on the Gloire de France with a stunning blonde, Greta Tosak, as her companion.

Greta is an inveterate gold digger, and she tries to attach herself to Bertie Adams, a noted millionaire sportsman. But Bertie Adams is solely interested in Raquel.

CHAPTER 28

When Bertie Adams threw off his ennui and ceased being a scoffer at life, he could be very attractive, Raquel decided. He was likable. He had an infectious laugh. He reminded her of a finely tempered steel blade: sure of himself, even when he bent.

"We'll dress for the races," Greta told Raquel. "Exactly as if we were going to Longchamps or one of the other swell French tracks."

"Yes, we ought to." Raquel welcomed any chance to delve into the closet with the yards of bewildering clothes. Alphonse would want them to look their best.

Greta thought Raquel should try a frock of black and white, a striking creation that carried out the idea of the modernists. And a [illegible] black coat with a silver fox collar.

"I'll wear this periwinkle blue," Greta said. "It makes me look as if a swear word would cause me to swoon."

She hailed Bertie when they joined him on deck.

"Wouldn't you think Kris Kringle had given us a million sire for a bangle?" she asked.

Playing Ponies

Girls Dress for It

"You'll do," he said to Greta. "But Miss Rojos—if Kris Kringle ever got a peep at her, he'd hang himself on her Christmas tree."

"He's teasing you, Greta." Raquel was not accustomed to banter.

"Oh no. He's just got bad eyesight. As I said to the Prince of Wales when he insisted on having my picture autographed—'Dave, I said—'"

"What number are you playing today?" Bertie cut in.

"Exactly what I asked the prince," said Greta. "But let my girl friend here, who has probably never played the ponies before, have first choice."

The races were a disappointment to Raquel. [illegible] wooden horses on a big board or track. [illegible] that wasn't here [illegible] When the race turned up the [illegible] pointing to the number [illegible] was [illegible] forward, it did not appear to be exciting.

"Your number?" Bertie asked.

"I'll choose three."

"I've got a bunch on five and seven," said Greta. Then, while Bertie went for the tickets, "Why didn't you take two numbers, old dear?"

"But—if I lost—"

"For the love of Pete, you don't think we are paying for these bets, do you?"

Number three won.

"Come around again tomorrow, Lady Luck," Bertie urged Raquel. "I trailed you on that three and I've made a cleaning. First race I ever won since I began buying bungalows for bookmakers. Wait here till I get our money." He was off to cash his tickets.

"Do you think I ought to take it?" Raquel asked Greta. "I didn't really buy the tickets—and I lost tossing coins." She had accepted money from one man—Farrell. Money she still owed.

Greta groaned.

"Honest," she said, "I don't make you at all. You get a swell break, and then you wonder if you ought to take it. And me! I had two chances to your one, and I drew a blank. With your luck, and my technique, dearie—can you imagine?"

"It just happened ——"

"Yes. So did the flood." Greta sighed disconsolately. "Of course, the tickets didn't cost me anything. I couldn't lose, but think what I might have won."

Bertie put some money in Raquel's hand. She did not know how much until she went to her room to dress for dinner.

"It's enough," she said to herself, "to pay the loan. I will send it as soon as I get to Paris. Then I will owe Jack Farrell nothing."

Stay for Dance

Showing Gowns

She had not assured herself entirely that her debt to Farrell would be paid with money. Didn't she owe him something more than a [illegible] roll of bills? He had stood by her. He had been waiting to marry her that night she hid in San Jeronimo Mission from Pancho, her father, and from Bill Johnson, the man to whom she was affianced. Farrell had promised her Adventure, the thing that [illegible]

She could not pay Farrell except in money. He was better off without her while this hunger for Beauty was in her veins, in her soul.

[illegible] Then he must finish his work.

"You need not stay for the dancing, Mademoiselle Raquel," he told her, hopeful that she would take advantage of his thoughtfulness.

"Sure, she'll stay," Greta insisted. "I can't show your whole line alone."

Bertie Adams did not leave Raquel's side [illegible]. His presence there aggravated the envy he could see in women's eyes. He drank a great deal. Thirstily, as if not only his throat but his very soul was parched. She remembered the Rosarit bull. When [illegible], the pink pig, had taken too much to drink.

"I feel tired," she said. "If you'll excuse me—"

[illegible] She wrapped [illegible] around her. Pushed open the door to her gray room.

A disheveled figure stood by the table under the dimmed lights. Bertie Adams. He smiled at her. A grave, tired smile.

"Can't find my bally stateroom," he said. Not a trip in his tongue. Only his glittering eyes told Raquel he was as a man in a trance.

"What can I do?" she asked blankly.

Her mind was in a crystal maze, struggling wildly to find its way out. Should she call the steward? No. She couldn't do that. With him here, in her room. Should she order this man to leave? He wouldn't even hear her.

Alphonse! Down the corridor.

"I'll find a room for you," she said, as if she had offered to get him his hat. "It's just around the corner."

He took her arm. [illegible] almost [illegible]

"Monsieur Alphonse!" Her hand was a beating of imperative wings against the door of the cabin. The door opened.

"Ma petite ——"

"This man, he can not find his room. Look to him. Look."

With a strength that sent the dazed Bertie Adams stumbling across the threshold, she pushed him from her and, turning, fled like a bright leaf in a breeze to the safety of her cabin.

Correct posture creates vitality. Slumping is an attitude of despair. There's many a little simp who'd like to look like a queen, but she can't because she hasn't a royal carriage. How one feels depends to a considerable extent upon how one walks, stands and sits. For the simple reason that correct posture affects the inner organs, keeps them where they belong, allows them to function better. With chest high, tummy held in and hips back, the nervous system is more likely to be strong and sound than when the backbone is limp and the step lagging.

Buttermilk is a reliable skin whitener, but it must be taken inside to the amount of a quart a day. Bathing the face with it does nothing to the complexion. Simplicity in Youthful Ensembles

By ANN ARDEN

(ANN ARDEN broadcasts latest style news over WHDH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.)

IN DRESSING the young girl, mothers are eternally confronted with the question of how old young clothes should be. Since the teen age yearns for fashions that ape those of their elders, it is sometimes difficult to strike a satisfactory mean between the sophisticated and the naive. Ensembles, for that reason, adequately answer the question. They maintain a definite simplicity, but may admit sophisticated little touches that satisfy youthful tastes.

GAY YOUNG things, like their mothers, have found that ensembles make a budget more elastic. A good jacket or coat in a well-chosen ensemble can do duty with other things.

SPORTIVELY SPEAKING, the jacket combination with dress or skirt and tuck-in is ace high. Pale pink silk dresses topped with fitted jackets and the nautical blue and white alliance are seen. Tuck-ins with jackets to match the skirts are enormously popular. Then in the spectator class you see the cape theme with contrasting blouse and matching skirt.

THE LONG COATED ensemble and the printed or plain frock are seen for town and afternoon functions. The coats of these ensembles are usually full length or seven-eighths, frequently unlined, so that they may double for other frocks. Little capelets, bows and belts are characteristic details. Prints and colors follow closely in the wake of older styles.

AND FOR evening, of course, you will find all manner of those short-jacketed, trailly-dressed affairs in lace, chiffon and flat crepe. A smart little person was seen wearing a multi-colored floor length chiffon frock with a short-caped jacket of flat crepe in a tone of the print.

THE CHIFFON ensemble pictured would enhance the charms of any "sweet young thing." It is developed in one of the new "water ice colors"—a "strawberry" tone—has the new moderately low decolletage, a full ruffle below the hips, and a lower ruffle of matching net. The shoulder cape is of chiffon, also with deep net ruffle, and tie ends which may be variously adjusted. The old-fashioned jewelry adds charm. This costume has been called, "The Answer to a Young Man's Dream."

Tips for the Altar-Bound

The modern marriage, like the modern novel, is so short that while the clergyman is reading the [illegible] you can turn to the last chapter and see how and about when it is going to end.

Almost any woman can marry a man while he is trying to forget the woman before." That is his weakest moment, when he is feeling SORRY for himself.

Now that sex appeal [illegible] as common as adenoids and as free as the air at a filling station, a woman must have some other appeal: money, brains or personality. Otherwise she is just "one of a crowd," in a man's consciousness.

A confirmed bachelor thinks there should be real traffic signals at the altar to warn prospective bridegrooms. But, the average bridegroom goes there in such a complete trance, that he wouldn't [illegible]

Many reams have been written about the Dinosaurus and the Perfect Lover, but what woman has ever met one in the LIFE?

A man cannot see the object of sitting down and writing a long lurid love-letter, when he can express his whole passion in a ten-word telegram, and then have a struggle to fit in the last three or four words.

It's a clever man who knows how to give commands in his own house, [illegible] to get advice and a wise wife who can give orders that sound like sweet requests.

When picking a wife, choose a girl who puts sugar in her tea and cream on her baked apple. She may not always be a sylph in a bathing suit, but the divorce courts are filled with [illegible] who have made nervous wrecks of themselves, "training down" in order to charm their husbands.

How to Keep Well -:- By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Arthritis Should Be Treated Early

Ancient peoples had most of the same diseases we meet today. Arthritis is of ancient origin, and it appears to have been the curse of ancient days.

The Egyptians of 5000 or more years ago were afflicted with it. We have had reports from German scientists who examined 30,000 Egyptian mummies. It was found that Egyptian slaves, who worked and sweated under the hot suns of the Nile, had a most perfect teeth. But persons of royal birth, those who ate soft food and banqueted sumptuously daily, had badly decayed teeth. Marked changes were found in the bones and joints of the mummies.

Dr. Copeland

There are many types of arthritis. The word arthritis means "inflammation of the joints." In one type, the tissues of the joints [illegible] involved. The ligaments and [illegible] accumulation of fluids in the joints and changes in the bones and [illegible]

One kind of arthritis, which is particularly painful and serious enough is "arthritis deformans." It is well-named because the joints become quite deformed. In acute attacks there is [illegible] and a rapid pulse [illegible] feel hot to the [illegible] motion seems to [illegible]

Infection of some sort [illegible] at the bottom of [illegible] infected tonsils or teeth and [illegible] constipation and [illegible] disturbances [illegible] the system which nature has to fight in the battle for supremacy.

Constipation leads to degeneration of the whole alimentary canal and the poisoning of the system through putrefying and [illegible] matter. Arthritis may be the result.

It has been said, "Nature is the curer of disease." Here is a case in point. In arthritis, rheumatism and gout a fever and swelling of the joints mean something. They do not represent a disease but the reaction of the organism against it.

Nowadays everybody realizes we [illegible] aid Nature in her cure all we can. To do this effectively may demand the unusual. For instance, in arthritis, instead of plunging the [illegible] joint [illegible] of the joint. In this way Nature, in her system of ridding the body of the invading bacteria [illegible] the germs a defense ring to keep them from going [illegible] the blood stream [illegible] heart and kidneys, those vital spots which are the guarded [illegible]. In helping Nature we use the same methods she does.

Every effort should be made to locate the source of infection. [illegible] ing should be taken for granted, but your physician should be called in early and with the right treatment [illegible] can be [illegible]

EVENING New York Stocks AMERICAN News of Street MARKETS

TRADING DULL FOR WEEK-END IN WALL ST.

New York, June 28—Trading was extremely dull for the week-end in Wall st. Prices worked lower most of the session.

Prices rallied smartly near the close, however, in several important shares.

American Tobacco "B" was up over a point, moving against the trend after early softness with continuation of the strength that has characterized the company's issues this week.

Southern Railway and Worthington Pump lowered 3 or more. Atchison was down over 2 and Allied Chemical off over 6.

OPENING IS HEAVY

Stocks were again inclined to heaviness at the opening. American Can, North American, International Harvester, National Dairy Products and American Locomotive lost about a point each. Johns-Manville, American Tobacco B and Goodyear lost 1½. Northern Pacific, however, rallied 2¼, Bethlehem Steel 1 point, and General Electric ½.

Stocks continued to sag under bear pressure in sluggish trading during the first half hour. Unfavorable employment figures from automotive centers and another assortment of uninspiring weekly mercantile reviews, while wholly in line with expectations, at least discouraged any aggressive opposition to the bear tactics.

Johns Manville was depressed about three points to new lows. North American was again subjected to selling pressure, losing more than two points.

Other issues selling off two points or so included American Telephone, Du Pont, Rock Island and New Haven.

STEEL SELLS OFF

U. S. Steel lost about a point, and bears again turned their attentions to General Motors, depressing it a little to within a fraction of the year's low.

Sears Roebuck and Stone & Webster sold up moderately at the opening, but soon began to sag. New York Central opened up ⅛, but soon showed a loss of more than a point.

Allied Chemical lost most of its Friday gain.

This stock had been sold by a bear crowd which thought it presented a bright prospect for attack. Apparently, however, the stock's friends were well prepared for a raid, the stock running up sharply on comparatively light volume. Attempt has been made to emphasize the relatively low yield on Allied furnished by its $6 cash dividend, but no mention was made by the bears of the 5 per cent stock dividend paid last year and the management's intention to pay additional stock dividends.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Paine, Webber & Co.—We still believe that the market will be irregularly higher until the July 4 holidays.

Otis & Co.—Unless a fairly sharp rally takes place within the next few days we believe it is conservative policy to expect further decline to follow from the trading range into which the market appears to have settled this week.

Jackson Bros., Boesel & Co.—We look for a trading range for the near future within rather narrow limits. When the flood of unfavorable earnings statements for the second quarter begin to appear in July it would be logical to expect a somewhat lower price level.

Hayden, Stone & Co.—Stocks are being bought today because the purchasers are convinced of their merit and want to own them. This is the best possible character of buying. It is the exact antithesis of the buying of a year ago. Then there was no thought of earnings of dividends, or anything that goes to make up value—merely a scramble to buy in the expectation of shortly being able to pass them along to some one else at higher figures. The result of that character of buying is a matter of history; the result of the present character of buying should make history of a different order.

Livingston & Co.—Many stocks are in a range where they should be accumulated in a moderate scale down to hold for a a pull. The general list of high-grade stocks is in, we believe, an accumulating rather than a distributing area.

Hornblower & Weeks—The fluctuations in today's short session will probably prove merely meaningless alterations of weakness and strength and no attempt to assume a definite direction can be looked for before the early trading next week.

Electricity Transforms World, Spreading Fast

In 1900 each American factory worker was supported by two mechanical horsepower. In 1930 each worker was backed by the equivalent of the power of five horses. The increase is mainly electric. Two-thirds of the prime-moving power of America is electric. It would require 41,000,000 horses, assuming that it would be physically possible to utilize them, to do the work now done by electricity. Thirty years ago 2,000,000 horses would have sufficed, says the Magazine of Wall Street.

The mechanization of industry is converting the world from one of want to one of sufficiency and surplus. Without electricity mechanization was definitely limited. Harnessed electricity has given man the victory in the struggle for the mastery of his environment.

Illumination and power have advanced together. Darkness has been overcome, night has been transformed into day. Electric light glows in the homes, shops, offices and factories of 25,000,000 American consumers. It has increased the efficiency of labor, brightened and enriched the hours of leisure, aided culture, multiplied social happiness.

Although electricity as the motive power of transportation has not greatly advanced since it superseded the horse for urban railway traction, extensive electrification of the railways is on the way; and it plays an essential part in the utilization of the internal combustion engine. The modern automobile owes as much to the electric spark as to the expanding force of burning gas. Thirty-five million automobile drivers the world around summon the genii of the electric lamp to start their motors and command them to keep them going. The air swarms with birdmen kept aloft by electricity-dependent motors.

The wonder of "What God hath wrought" the words that Morse tapped over the first telegraph wire, from Baltimore to Washington in 1844—in the field of communications surpasses all the wonders of fairy tale, myth and legend. The world is wrapped with 7,000,000 miles of telegraph lines, of which a third are in the United States, and over them flash near a billion messages annually.

The electrically operated telephone conveys spoken words 81 million times daily on 110,000,000 miles of wire and repeats them through 36,000,000 instruments. The oral and auditory contact capacity of the individual has been incalculably increased. Now comes television to do for vision and the eye what the telephone has done for sound and the ear. The movie, the talkie and the radio are functioned by electricity, and thus this power contributes to the entertainment, education and chronicles of mankind.

Instantaneous distance communication has mightily increased the velocity as well as the volume of business transactions. It has brought the nations together, facilitated banking, universalized the applicability of cash and credit, informed and promoted investment.

Electricity performs the humble and menial tasks, as well as the great and noble ones. In the home, hotel and factory, its energy cleans, preserves, heats and cools.

Its power and light have transformed life on 60,000 farms; and the power companies are now intent upon the great job of putting their wires into the remaining 6,000,000 farms. By taking the drudgery and isolation out of rural life; by giving it news, information and entertainment; by giving it power and speed, electricity is solving the farm problem.

All of this vast transformation, vastly greater, stupendously more wonderful than the magic feats of Aladdin's lamp, has been mainly wrought since Edison "rubbed" his incandescent lamp in 1879, and especially within the last 10 years. Its creative and administrative business instrumentalities—the great utility and electrical equipment corporation—are as much the wonders of business and scientific research as the manifestations of its physical power are of industry, transport, traction and communication.

SHOE INDUSTRY LIKES TARIFF

Lynn study shows the women's shoe industry is finishing up an eventful half year. Production for the early part was at the rate of 2,300,000 pairs a week for the entire country. It eased off towards the end of the half, and the total was 1,000,000 pairs less than a year ago, according to a late government bulletin reporting production to April 30.

Congress put a duty on shoes, and this was one of the best achievements of the year, according to many makers of women's shoes. With the tariff bars up, and markets firming up, and stocks believed to be low in retail stores, manufacturers are looking forward to a better state of affairs during the second half of 1930. It is believed there will be fairly liberal buying in the coming July markets.

Prices declined with commodity markets. Wages eased off, too. The problem of unemployment was not solved. A few firms are trying the five-day week. Styles changed, plain shoes like those of black mat kid and calf, taking the place of many of the high-hued novelties of a year ago. Manufacturers had a struggle to make a profit in the face of decreasing prices and lesser demand.

Sales to chains were one bright spot. Chains handle half the women's shoes, according to a current report in the trade. Some doubt it. However, it is generally admitted that chains have steadily increased their sales of women's shoes during the last few years

Eastern Utilities Gross Earnings Up

Eastern Utilities Associates reports for the 12 months ending May 31, gross earnings were $9,373,722, against $8,909,290, an increase of $464,431.

Balance after taxes, interest and amortization in May was $183,143 compared with $206,110 a year ago. For the 12 months, similar balance was $2,896,354, against $2,792,422.

For the 12 months' period, after dividends on preferred stock of constituent companies and after amount applicable to common stock of constituent companies in hands of public, there was a balance applicable to reserves and Eastern Utilities Associates of $2,870,[illegible] against $2,586,650.

CURRENT ERA ONE OF MOST INVENTIONS

By FRANK H. MELOON

Two decades or so ago the school text books used to put the "age of invention" in the past, linking with its leadership the names of Whitney and Howe, Bay State geniuses and others of the same approximate period. The fact that we are living in the actual "age of invention," however, is demonstrated by announcement that the U. S. Patent Office within the week has published the largest official gazette ever issued, containing 3174 patents.

Whitney made no money from his great invention, the cotton gin without which the great cotton crops would not have been possible. He made his fortune by the invention and production of firearms. The inventor today has considerable difficulty, as a rule, in finding a market for his product it is true. Yet he knows that a market, if the invention has sufficient merit, often he is able to talk in terms of thousands, whereas inventors of a few decades ago were generally poorly recompensed at all.

• • •

Mayor Curley's appointment of Frank S. Davis, manager of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, to fill the vacancy in the Boston port authority was well received in State St. circles. Mr. Davis has long been a stout battler for the interests of this port, not only locally but also at the national capital. His achievements in behalf of the port of Boston are numerous.

Recessional tendencies in Boston Elevated issues recently have not been attributed in State St. to the impending public balloting on the "L's" future, but rather to the staggering character of the market as at whole. At the State election in November voters in the Metropolitan Transit District, which includes Boston and 13 suburbs, will express their preference for one of three plans for future control of the Elevated.

These are: 1. Private ownership and control (returning operation of road to stockholders); 2. Public control (continuing under terms acceptable to stockholders); 3. Public ownership (purchase and operation by District).

The result of the referendum will be duly sent to the Legislature although the public press will have informed the members long before they get "official" information. The vote is merely advisory. It will not bind the Legislature to the course favored. The Legislature can and doubtless will, act as they see fit. Large "L" stockholders have not been disposing of their holdings.

According to the Electrical World, the annual consumption of electricity in the homes amounts to 8,489,000,000 kilowatt hours, of which approximately one-third is used in appliances, and the remainder for lighting. All of the electric flatirons in the United States consume a total of 1,044,000,000 kilowatt hours each year; electric ranges use 1,012,000,000; and refrigerators 522,000,000. Vacuum cleaners consume 209,000,000 kilowatt hours and radio sets 154,000,000. Motors for oil-burning apparatus consume 80,000,000 kilowatt hours. Percolators use more than 87,000,000 kilowatt hours and electric fans over 66,000,000.

Flatirons lead all other appliances in number with a total of 17,700,000 vacuum cleaners are next with 7,700,000; washing machines, 5,775,000; electric fans 5,600,000 and electric toasters, 5,325,000. Among other electric appliances are 1,223,000 refrigerators and 725,000 ranges. Small cookers number 1,050,000.

As an indication of the extent to which American homes have applied electric lighting, it is estimated that at the present time there are in use 55,000,000 portable lamps of all kinds, including table, floor and bedside lamps, and all others not classed as fixtures. Last year the American public used more than five billion kilowatt hours of electricity for lighting in their homes.

• • •

The following is a list of some of the larger projects now being figured which have not been previously mentioned, according to Brown's Letters, Inc., Construction Reports, who have plans and specifications on file in their office:

Municipal courthouse addition, Brighton, architects, O'Connell & Shaw, Boston.

Alexander Hamilton school addition, Brighton, architect, George Nelson Jacobs, Boston.

Under management of New England Industries, Inc., which took control Thursday at adjourned annual meeting, it is proposed to purchase 800 to 1000 wide looms, rearrange machinery and make other changes designed to place the York mills on a stronger competitive basis. About $800,000 to $1,000,000 will be required in this program.

Merchants National Bank of Salem declared regular semi-annual dividend of six per cent ($3) and extra of four per cent ($2), both payable July 1. Six months ago the same dividends were declared.

WHEAT LOWER IN CHICAGO

Chicago, June 28 (AP)—Despite a show of firmness at the outset, wheat prices here underwent an early downturn today. Liverpool traders were credited with buying in Chicago, but upturns in the market ran against enlarged general selling that went hand in hand with reports of heavy rain in Alberta Province, Canada.

Starting unchanged to ⅛c higher, Chicago wheat values afterward showed material setbacks all around.

Corn, oats and provisions were likewise easier, with corn opening unchanged to ⅛c up, and subsequently receding to well below yesterday's finish.

Tessier's arrest is said by the agents to have been in connection with a raid on May 23 when a saloon and truck load of beer were seized in Cabot st. they claiming that he was with the party on that night but got away.

Roy's arrest is in connection with raids made twice within two weeks at a farm in Dracut. Agents Hart and Hogan and Police Officer Owen S. Conway made the arrests.

The woman's oldest son was placed under observation. She told police that she lived in fear of her boy and that he had threatened to kill her. On one occasion, she said, she had been cut by a knife in his hands.

Haverhill Shoe Men to Exhibit

Haverhill, June 28—Many Haverhill shoe manufacturers who are to have exhibits at the Boston shoe and leather style show, to be held in the Hotel Statler, July 7, 8 and 9, have their samples ready and the confident with the display they will make they will obtain a large number of orders.

Although shoe manufacturing is now at a low ebb it will probably take on a new boom after the Boston show. Other orders that are expected to be received from salesmen and by mail should materially aid in the resumption of operations in many of the factories.

Two Auto Drivers Escape in Crash

Methuen, June 28—Two men, drivers of automobiles, narrowly escaped possible serious injury late last evening when their cars collided at Swan and Jackson streets.

The automobile operated by Edward J. Lighte of Lowell, turned over on the pavement after it had struck a lighter car operated by Harold E. Driscoll of 86 Dorchester st., Lawrence. Driscoll, claimed he was nearly across the intersection when Lighte's car put in an appearance and the inevitable collision occurred.

STABILIZING OF INDUSTRY IS FORECAST

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, June 28—Despite the bearish predictions that have been flying thick and fast through the financial district for the last few weeks, leaders of American industry and business refuse to be stampeded into embracing the discouraging viewpoint with respect to the immediate future, or to relax in their efforts to bring about normal prosperous conditions.

"The country and its industries," said the head of one of the biggest manufacturing concerns, "have lived through periods more distressing and more severe than that of the present and there is no reason to believe that we shall not again, within a reasonably short time, get our soundings and attain a condition of stability."

RECOVERY UNDER WAY

The fact cannot be made too plain that, long before the reaction in the stock market has touched bottom, recoveries in important sections of industry and business will already have been under way.

There has never been a time in the financial history of the country when the industrial and the stock market pendulums swung in a direct line.

Usually, business recession begins a few months in advance of the downward move in stock prices and ends in about the same relation. On that basis stocks will still be moving downward after business has shown a fine recovery.

From the testimony of skillful observers of financial and economic conditions, that is exactly what has been happening in the last two weeks. To say that all sections of American business is on its bottom is to utter an absurdity which betrays at once the source of information of those making the statement.

PROMISING OUTLOOK

The general opinion is that the following departments of American business are now facing the most promising outlook for the last half of 1930: Chain stores, electric equipment, motion pictures, ship building, tobacco, electric light and power and telephone industries.

Those in which the outlook is good include the manufacturers of agricultural machinery, cement, chemicals, oil producing and railroads. The oil refining and marketing and meat packing outlook is somewhat beclouded by the decline in retail prices and over-production.

Investors in equity stocks will naturally shape their program to coincide with their views as to the future prospect of the industries and enterprises in which they propose to invest their funds.

Even though prices of numerous well known stocks have fallen away to a shadow, as compared to values prevailing earlier in the year, this is no guarantee that the stocks are on the bargain counter.

The yardstick of corporation earnings must be rigidly employed to determine acceptable investment values for stocks of every grade.

Where there is an excellent basis for the expectation of a business revival, the cash position and dividend policies of corporations should receive important consideration.

Many corporations which have piled up comfortable cash surpluses are willing to pay dividends for a year or two after they have ceased to "cover" their dividends fully.

Such a course denotes a liberal dividend policy, but obviously it cannot be continued indefinitely. That is why earnings constitute a more accurate gauge of stocks than dividends.

WILL VOTE ON WELFARE AID

Amesbury, June 28—Amesbury voters, in special town meeting next Monday night, will pass upon the questions of authorizing an additional appropriation of $15,000 for the welfare department, and whether a 10-ton tractor snowplow that cost $10,000 should be disposed of and a more modern machine purchased.

Owing to the heavy demand for aid for worthy families the past few months, the welfare department appropriation of $14,000 has been expended, and it is estimated that at least $15,000 more will be needed during the remainder of the fiscal year to continue charity work.

Woman Burned by Firecracker Blast

Lawrence, June 28—The second casualty in two days in the pre-Fourth of July period was reported to police last evening by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan.

Mrs. Filomena Mussillio, of 62 Basswood st., while on her way home along Lawrence st., near the Spicket river, was struck by a firecracker thrown by a youth.

The ignited explosive struck the woman on the left arm and exploded, causing a burn so severe that she had to be removed to a physician's office for treatment.

One large stockholder is said to have liquidated 50,000 shares of North American, which he held outright, but perhaps was forced to raise cash to protect other issues, held on margin.

Worthington Pump has been subjected to bear attacks recently, showing good powers of resistance. Considerable difference of opinion exists as to this company's actual earnings.

Boston Stock Exchange notice issued today states:

"The attention of members is again called to Chapter XIII of the Rules of the Exchange, which reads:

"'In the settlement of transactions involving one thousand dollars or more the seller is entitled to a certified check.'"

Prince & Whitely see a new merger period impending. In their market letter today the brokers state:

"The present market situation is very conducive, we think, to mergers and it is possible that this is the factor that will bring about renewed interest. Some stimulation may come about as a result of the adjournment of Congress, but the most vitally important need at this time is an upward move in the prices of commodities."

Injuries which become infected cost close to five times more than injuries where there is no infection, according to analysis of the cost of industrial injuries by Bauer & Black division of the Kendall company. Average cost of hurts from handling sharp and rough objects is shown to be $86 when non-infected; $204 when infected, and average cost of infected cases from wooden slivers nearly four times the cost of non-infected cases.

An analysis of the percentage of infections to total injuries shows that the hands and fingers sustain the greatest proportion of infection, the trunk of the body the least. Of over 34,000 injuries to hands and fingers 27.7 per cent became infected; of over 25,000 injuries to feet and legs 8.6 per cent became infected; out of over 15,000 injuries to the trunk less than 1 per cent resulted in infection.

Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey will expand marketing operations in Pittsburgh district by acquisition of Waverley Oil Works Co. service stations within a short time. Purchase will mark new development in battle for major share of Pittsburgh market for petroleum products. Plan of Gulf Oil Corp. to lay pipe line from Tulsa to Pittsburgh and to construct refinery is one phase of struggle.

Allied Chemical & Dye Corp.'s first six months was on the up trend, and probably equal to last year, due to economies and expansion in various directions. Road-building material department and the Hopewell nitrogen plant are showing good profits, and, although some subsidiaries show a falling-off in business, the company is probably making a satisfactory showing. Allied publishes no figures concerning operations other than those of the whole year.

Those who have followed the company since organization in 1920 believe that if Allied reported its true earnings for 1930 they would be between $20 and $30 a share. It earned $12.60 a share on 2,178,109 no-par shares of common in 1929.

Department of Public Utilities has authorized issuance by New England Power Co. of 53,333 shares of additional $25 par stock at $30 a share. Proceeds are to be used to pay outstanding notes amounting to $1,476,299 as of Dec. 31, 1929, and balance applied to expenditures made subsequent to that date.

Holyoke Water Power So. declared regular quarterly dividend of $3 per share and an extra dividend of $1 a share, both payable July 2 to stock of record June 27. Similar declarations were made three and six months ago.

Central Trust Co. of Illinois says:

"Our study of figures on fundamental business operations discloses improvement over last year-end, and over early months of this year.

"Unemployment is being modified, through harvest demand for temporary labor, and construction is developing fast enough to provide an outlet for the floating harvest worker in almost any part of the country. Highway building program and railway extension and improvement program are almost an offset for the decline in building.

"Employment figures for May do not on their face indicate a serious unemployment situation or a material shrinkage in buying power of these groups. The whole employment picture (railroads and financial companies not included) indicates more than 5,000,000 workers reported are earning $1 less per week than a year ago, or that 4 per cent are earning nothing. The apparent shrinkage in buying power of these groups, which probably represent one-fourth of the population in themselves and their families, amounts to about $1,000,000,000 per day from the average of May, 1929."

Newburyport Pair Given Jail Terms

Newburyport, June 28—George F. Dow and Frank Janvrin were each sentenced to 60 days in the house of correction for malicious injury to a building, and 30 days on breaking and entering charges in district court yesterday. Both appealed and were held in $500 bonds for superior court. They were charged with thefts at Chipman Mines on June 12.

Twenty-two alleged violators, the largest number in several years, appeared in district court yesterday before Special Justice Ernest Foss.

Scalese to Run in Haverhill

Haverhill, June 28—Francis Scalese of Wilson st. announced today that he is an independent candidate for representative from the fourth Essex district and had filed his papers with City Clerk Robert H. Quinby for certification by the board of registrars.

Scalese was an unsuccessful candidate for the same office in 1924 and has also been an aspirant for alderman in two or three campaigns.

Utility Is Buying

United Gas Corp., controlled by Electric Power & Light Corp., has acquired majority of preferred and common stocks of Northern Texas Utilities Co.

BENDIX EARNS DIVIDEND

Bendix Aviation Corp. is understood to have earned its dividend in May despite the general let-up in the automotive and aviation industries. In April it fell a trifle short of covering its monthly dividend charge and it is barely possible that it may not meet the full requirements in June because of the increased curtailment by several motor manufacturers.

Unless, however, the necessity should arise for the establishment of special reserves at the end of the half-year, it is likely that earnings for the second quarter will somewhat better the showing for the three months ended March 31, when net income totaled $751,681, or 36 cents a share on the 2,115,000 shares of no-par stock outstanding. Bendix is currently paying $2 per annum and has every intention of maintaining this disbursement through the year.

With $10,000,000 cash the company continues in strong financial position.

Announcement is likely to be made in a few weeks of the proposed manufacture of new aviation and automobile accessory products and of the acquisition of new accounts by the sheet manufacturing division.

HOLD DRIVE FOR HEALTH CAMP

Lowell, June 28—Lowell today is being called upon to "give generously" for the support of the children's summer health camp, which state health authorities to have in past years has been credited by been the means of curing many children of incipient tuberculosis.

The sum of $3000 is needed for necessary improvements at the camp, and since 7 o'clock this morning solicitors have been out on the street corners and going from house-to-house as well as asking contributions for this very necessary work.

It is the first time in the history of the camp, which was started about eight years ago by Dr. Francis A. Finnegan, then director of school hygiene, that the general public has been asked to contribute to the support of the institution, although some individuals and several large concerns have aided quietly with gifts of supplies for the camp.

Funeral Services for Amesbury Man

Amesbury, June 28—Funeral services for George P. Dennett, 64, former Amesbury carriage manufacturer and who was later a pioneer in the building of automobile bodies, were held from the family home in Moody st. this afternoon.

He was born in Salisbury and in early life joined his father in the manufacture of carriages in this town. The past few years he had been employed by the Amesbury Electric Co. He was a charter member of the Boston Rotary club.

Starts Work With Recess Committee

Newburyport, June 28—The special committee to consider the advisability of filling in part of the Fort Point channel and South Bay, Boston Harbor, met for organization yesterday at the State House. Representative McKay of this city is one of the members. This is the first recess committee to start work for the year.

Elderly Woman Is Killed by Machine

Salem, N. H., June 28—Mrs. Ellen B. Smith, 788, of Main st., one of the best known of this town's older residents, was almost instantly killed last evening in Salem Center square when she was sruck and felled by an automobile operated by Louis George, also of this town.

END OF TRADE GLOOM SEEN AS NEARING

New York, June 28—Business in the United States will emerge from depression at the end of July. It then will swing upward and, stealing a march on the slow-witted and self-centered stock market, will become normal in October, says The Business Week today.

The business tide reached its ebb during the past two weeks and is beginning to turn, very slowly and tentatively, in face of a strong current of peevish, superficial and premature pessimism.

"There will be no noticeable change in the next few weeks," the weekly adds. "Continued liquidation in certain lines will overlap and obscure increasing resistance, stabilization and upturn in others. Progress will be slow, irregular, spasmodic, with sporadic relapses, successively less frequent and sharp, till the end of July.

"Then, in the same weeks when a year ago the downturn began, a decisive recovery will set in, general and definite enough to be evident to the blue-funk brigades of business who have been enjoying their May-parties and June-walks in the cemeteries. The rise of the business curve thereafter will be rapid. By October it will be back to normal.

"There was a sharp circumstantial rise in the Business Index from the low point of 88.8 per cent last week to 93.6 per cent this week, a figure comparing with 110.7 per cent in the corresponding week last year. Other statistical straws suggest strongly that the confused economic currents are setting more uniformly in the direction of recovery. The adjournment of Congress will help clear the Channel."

TRUST GAINS IN HALF-YEAR

The trustees of Century Shares Trust, with whom Brown Bros. & Co. are identified, have declared a semi-annual dividend of $1 a share on the participating shares, payable Aug. 1, 1930, to shareholders of record July 1, 1930.

The semi-annual statement as of June 30, 1930, shortly to be issued, is expected to show a surplus (after the present dividend) greater than at the end of 1929, notwithstanding that the general level of security prices is lower now than at the end of last year.

In this connection the portfolio of Century Shares Trust, it will be recalled, consists entirely of stocks of the leading banks in the United States and Canada and the largest and most important insurance companies—life, casualty and fire—whose businesses enjoy a stability more constant, whatever general business conditions may be, than those in many other fields.

ALMOST LOSE OUT ON TRIP

Lowell, June 28—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Ward, and their three children, all of this city, are on their way for a long-planned vacation in New York, but they came near losing this pleasure and spent an hour of intense worry before matters finally were straightened out.

The family boarded a Westford street car and rode to the depot in Middlesex st. where they were to take a train to Boston as the first leg of their journey. When they left the house, the mother had a pocketbook with $100 or more safely tucked away, but when they went to buy their tickets at the railroad station the pocketbook was missing.

A hurried appeal to the police brought Lieuts. Philip Dwyer and Martin Maher to their aid and within an hour they had chacked up on all of the passengers on the car and received from one passenger the pocketbook with the woman's funds intact.

Pittsburgh Steel Extra Is Ordered

New York, June 28 (AP)—Directors fo the Pittsburgh Steel Foundry Co. have declared extra dividend of 25 cents, in addition to the regular quarterly disbursement of 25 cents, on the common, payable July 15 to stock of record July 7.

Directors of the Sharon Steel Hoop Co. have declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common shares, payable July 25 to stock of record July 5, placing that issue on a $1 annual basis compared with $2 paid previously.

A statement issued by the directors said it was deemed wise to conserve the present excellent current position of the company until a more definite forward movement in business is in evidence.

Paramount Publix

Paramount Publix stockholders, June 6, numbered 16,486, a new high record for the company. March 7 there were 13,731 stockholders and in June, 1929, 9855.

Omits Dividends

Monolith Portland Cement Co. directors voted to omit payment of semi-annual dividend of 40 cents on the 8 per cent cumulative preferred and 40 cents semi-annual dividend on the common.

NOT ENOUGH.

T. A., Boston—I am a young man, steadily employed, and have saved about $600. Please suggest a good stock for that amount.

Ans.—You have not enough for investment. The difference between savings bank interest on $600 and income from a standard security would be very small. Don't disturb your fund. Save something regularly until you have $3000. Then write to us.

FOUR PER CENT

L. L., Lawrence—I want to buy a stock for regular income. Would Corn Products do?

Ans.—Corn Products has paid dividends in varying amounts, with extras, from 1920. Last year's extras totaled $1.50 a share; so far this year, 75 cents. Net profits in 1929 were $5.49 a share, compared with $4.35 in 1928 and $3.88 in 1927. For quarter ended March 31, 1930, net was $1.07 a share, against $1.18 for similar period of 1929. The company is a leading factor in the manufacture of starch, glucose, corn oil and syrup. Based on regular $4 dividend, the yield, at recent low levels, was 4 per cent. This contrasts with savings bank interest of 4½ per cent and a 6 per cent return from many sound preferred stocks. What amount of income do you need?

SPECULATIVE STOCK

L. L., Concord—I have noticed your comments on securities. Is Stewart-Warner a good investment? How long have dividends been paid?

Ans.—Dividends were paid on Stewart-Warner old stock from 1913. The annual rate on the new stock, issued in two-for-one split in April, 1929, had been $3.50 a share. However, in May, 1930, it was reduced to $1 annually, because of unsatisfactory business. Net profits in 1929 were $5.37 a share, compared with $6.00 in 1928 and $4.31 in 1927; in the first quarter of current year, 50 cents a share contrasted with $1.58 for similar period of 1929. The company's business depends very largely on the automobile industry, in which conditions now are not encouraging. Why not tell us something about your financial circumstances? You may need bonds.

TIRES WORTH $75 STOLEN

Lawrnce, June 28—Harvey Sherwood, manager of the Trenton Re-Built Tire Company store, at 409 Broadway, who was held up and robbed at gunpoint in his place of business three weeks ago, was last night summoned from his bed to make an inventory of his stock to decide how many tires had been stolen in a daring break at his store.

Patrolman John McCormack found the rear door of the place open shortly before 11 o'clock. Five tires were piled near the door as if in preparation for removal when the thieves were scared away.

Sherwood went over his stock and declared that twelve tires valued at about $75 were missing. A desk had been pried open by the thieves but nothing taken.

RUMORED N. Y. BANK CHANGES CALLED UNTRUE

By B. C. FORBES

New York, June 28—So far as I can ascertain, every one of the many rumors concerning New York Banking Changes is without foundation.

B. C. Forbes

What everybody expects, rarely happens. Everybody today is prepared to see commodity prices go still lower, to see stock prices drag drably through a colorless summer, and to see no real improvement in business until fall or winter.

Well, events may fool them. We have had spirited industrial pick ups in summer before now. Vigorous stock market advances in summer have not been unknown. When basic commodities fall below cost of production, they are just as apt to rebound in summer as in any other season.

I don't know how it is with you, but in the last couple of weeks some of the people I have talked with have exhibited a little more cheerfulness than formerly.

Here and there are manufacturers who report a slight pickup in demand. Retailers who report a modest increase in customers, salesmen who find prospects not quite so stony.

Perhaps the wish is father to the thought, but I, for one, would not be amazed were July and August to prove somewhat less disappointing than May and June.

How drastic the deflation has been in the stock market is strikingly illustrated by this sentence from a stock exchange firm's (Frazier, Jelke & Co.) letter:

"At its recent low, Kroger was selling for 17 per cent of its 1929 high; Chrysler, 18 percent; Columbia Graphophone, 19 percent; Montgomery Ward, 21 percent; United Aircraft, 28 percent; International Telephone, 27 percent; Radio, 28 percent; International Nickel, 29 percent; Anaconda, 31 percent; American Rolling Mill, 35 percent; Kennecott, 36 percent; Electric Bond & Share, 37 percent; General Motors, 42 percent; Union Carbide, 43 percent; Woolworth, 49 percent; National Dairy Products, 52 percent; Electric Auto Lite, 58 percent; Consolidated Gas, 54 percent; United States Steel, 58 percent, and New York Central, 60 percent."

It was no more dangerous to be stampeded into buying stocks at their last year's tops than it is safe to buy them at their low figures of this year. The mob was wrong then. Mob selling at recent current panicky quotations will doubtles prove equally shortsighted.

To express it differently, stocks stand just as much chance of advancing from their current low levels as they did of declining from their last year's tops.

One able son succeeded an able father as presidnet of a very important enterprise this week, when J. Dugald White became president of J. G. White & Co., Inc., investment bankers, his father J. G. White, becoming chairman of the board.

The new president has had thorough training. A graduate of Cornell University, he served as captain in the 369th Infantry in France and was decorated with the Croix de Guerre. After the armistice he was attached to the military organization which endeavored to determine the extent of allied war damages for the American commission to negotiate peace.

Although onlf 41, he has been a a vice-president of the company for 11 years. Not only so, but he i salso an officer or director in many other companies, including in addition to the three J. G. White companies, Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Co., North Star Insurance Co., General Alliance Corp., General Reinsurance Corp., Foreign Light & Power Co., National Toll Bridge Co., Osceola Cypress Co., American Salamandra Corp., Engineering Investors Corp., and is likewise chairman of the Municipal & General Sureties Co., Ltd., of London, and president of White Foundation, Inc.

Like many of the younger school of progressive business leaders, he believes in a rational amount of recreation. He is a golfer and is also commodore of the Bay Head Yacht Club.

One new record: Railway communication travel in the first quarter of this year eclipsed anything ever before recorded. Eight years ago commuters numbered only 46 out of each 100 rail travelers; they now number 63.

From one reader, John Myers:

"Wouldn't it be as sensible to mass the forces of this nation in these days of uncertainty and stress for constructive purposes as it is to do so for defensive purposes in time of war? Wouldn't it be a lot more sensible to issue a few billions of government bonds now and beautify this great country with wonderful highways, improve harbors and perfect flood control?

"We might just as well utilize the methods we found successful to fight an external enemy in time of war, to cope with an insidious one on the inside in time of peace. We would at least be spending our money and energy in a constructive way, instead of wasting it in burning up gunpowder?"

Secretary of Commerce Lamont's computation, based on census figures, indicatig that our unemployed total 2,298,558, is encouraging.

My crossroads country schoolcaster, who was a sage of sages, used to observe on appropriate occasion, "This, too, will pass." Even the present all-enveloping pessimism will pass.

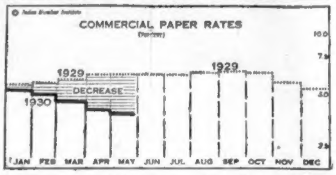
Paper Rates Lower



Monthly Averages of Daily Rates on Prime Names, 4-6 Months Commercial Paper

By JOHN W. LAIRD
(Irving Fisher Service)

For some months the prevalence of increasingly easy money for commercial uses has been hailed as the basis for a pickup in business. One of the reasons for money's low loaning rates is that comparatively few businesses seem to want it. Their reluctance to borrow at these rates arises from their inability to see sufficient market for the goods which this borrowed money would finance. At present prices unit costs of goods would be lower than for 15 years in many instances, yet the extreme circumspection of the consumer today gives little encouragement to the merchant, particularly as he sees the quotations of his raw materials tending still lower.

By the close of last month, for the first time on record, reporting member banks of the Federal Reserve System reported loans on securities exceeding commercial loans. The tendency had been in that direction for some time. A year ago it was felt that credit loaned against collateral was pinching the supply for commercial uses. That is far from being the case today, when slow business itself accounts for the low aggregate of commercial borrowing.

Ticker Talk

By THE WALL STREET SPECTATOR

New York, June 28—There was encouragement both for the bulls and the bears in yesterday's irregular market, but little satisfaction for the long-pull trader. Demand for the best of investment shares was comparatively small and thus prices eased off dishearteningly whenever a few thousand shares were thrown on the market.

On the other hand, it required a comparatively small volume of buying orders to bring about a spirited rally and thus to restore the early losses. This is known technically as a "thin market," and, all things being equal, ushers in a period of stability in stock prices.

In view of the drastic shake-out in all sections of the market in the last four weeks, the problem once more reverts to consideration of whether the next major movement of prices will be upward or downward. We have deflated a great many of last year's extravagant notions about stock values as related to corporation earnings and other important factors. But for the surprising decline in money rates, some further deflation from the standpoint of income yields might be in order.

However, the investor who can borrow money at 2½ and 3 per cent against stock holdings is probably justified in buying stocks which give only a 4 to 5 per cent income yield, provided the stocks are properly selected and offer a reasonable prospect for enhancement of market values as general business improves.

Distribution during the first two weeks of July of nearly a billion dollars in interest and dividends will furnish an investment fund which may be reflected in the firming up of prices of high-grade stocks.

American Radiator and Standard Sanitary

The first signs of a turn in the corner has just been evidenced in the all-important building industry. New construction figures for the first 17 days of this month totaled $19,835,000, compared with $18,296,000 in the same period last year. This is especially significant in that it marks the first increase of the year to date. Although American Radiator has sustained a let-down in business in the first half of this year, official announcement from the company reports considerably improved business over recent weeks. Accumulation of this issue, generally regarded as the premier investment in the construction field, has been taking place, in anticipation of the continuation of improvement in building operations. Despite the probability that full results for 1930 may fall below the $2.02 per share reported in 1929, there seems to be no doubt about the safety of the annual dividend of $1.50. This provides a return of 6 per cent at prevailing levels.

Cutler-Hammer

This stock is regarded with favor among quarters particularly interested not so much in speculative possibilities of the moment, as in adequate dividend return, and earnings more than sufficient to uphold the current rate of payment. Net income in 1929 was of record proportions and was equal to $8.14 a share. Conservative estimates place the probable results for this year above $6 per share, thus placing the current market price of the stock at slightly under 10 times earnings. The outstanding common stock of 330,000 shares is the sole obligation of the company, a leader in the electrical equipment field. The annual $3.50 dividend rate is equivalent to approximately a 6 per cent yield at present prices.

American International

Investors who are loath to enter commitments while stocks are following the current erratic trend, may find good possibilities in this prominent investment trust, the deflated value of which provides a return of close to 7 per cent.

COTTON PRICES ARE STEADY

New York, June 28—Cotton opuened steady today at an advance of 6 points to a decline of 4 points. The relatively steady showing of Liverpool led to some buying in the near months, but later deliveries were easier under local selling, and prices generally eased off slightly right after the call.

The buying was limited with prices responding to comparatively small offerings. July eased off from 13.58 to 13.52, or back to yesterday's closing quotations, while the new October sold off to 12.92 or 3 points net lower. The general market was quiet, with active months ruling about net unchanged to 5 points lower later. Liverpool cables said there had been Continental buying, covering and good month-end selling in that market.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 67,000 bales against 61,000 last year. A private crop report placed the decrease in acreage of 3.3 per cent. The condition at 71 per cent and the indicated crop at 14,435,000 bales.

DOLLAR TRADE VOLUME IS UP FOR WEEK

Business for the week ended June 21, as measured by the volume of checks presented for payment, was more than 17 per cent greater than the week ended June 14.

The activity of steel mills, for the latest reported week, receded slightly from the preceding period and was below the level of a year ago. The volume of building in 37 states, as shown by the value of contracts awarded, was less when compared with the preceding week and the same period a year ago.

Wholesale prices declined slightly from last week and were 12 per cent lower than the same week last year. The composite iron and steel price remained unchanged from the preceding period, but showed a decline when compared with a year ago.

Bank loans and discounts registered an increase of 1 per cent over the week ended June 14 and 3 per cent over the same period in 1929. Prices for stocks showed declines from both comparative periods. Bond prices remained unchanged when compared with a week ago and were 2 per cent higher than the corresponding period a year ago.

Interest rates for both call and time money declined from the preceding week and the same period of last year. The number of business failures as reported by Dunn & Co. were fewer than during a week ago.

As compared with the corresponding period in 1928 increases occurred in the receipts of cotton, bank loans and discounts and the prices for representative stocks.

Cup Business Makes Gain Every Month of Year to Date

Chicago, June 28—P. T. Potts, president of the Vortex Cup Co., states that business has been increasing steadily during each month of 1930 and that both gross sales of paper drinking cups and net profits for May were in excess of any previous May in the history of the company. For the calendar year ended December 31, 1929, the company showed net profits of $4.95 per share of common stock after allowing for dividend on the Class A.

Mr. Potts believes for the 12 months ending September 30, 1930, net earnings for the common stock will be well in excess of the figure reported last year.

OHIO STEAMBOAT RACE OVER WBZA TONIGHT

Finish of Annual River Classic Will Be Heard at 5:30

When the Betsy Ann and the Tom Greene churn the water of the Ohio river today in a boat race that promises to recall the days of the Natchez and the Robert E. Lee, the microphone of the NBC will carry the running story of the river boat classic to the Boston audience through WBZA.

A complete broadcast starting at 3 o'clock will be heard through many of the stations but WBZA will take only the finish at 5:30.

An interesting feature is that George Hicks, will announce the progress of the race from the pilot house of the Tom Greene. Last year the Tome Greene crossed the finish line just 20 feet ahead of the Betsy Ann. The winner this year will receive a trophy carved from the historic Robert E. Lee, record breaking Mississippi steamboat.

CONCERNING RADIO

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

What a lengthy list would be that containing the names of the myriad men and women who have flashed across the horizon of the broadcasting world during the past five years. Those who have come, had their day before the "mike" for a short or long period, and then, drifting into obscurity, were heard no more.

A few there are, however, who, because of some particular appeal of their entertainment and their personality, still continue after years of effort on the air to not only hold a large following of their listeners, but continually add to their admirers.

One young man there is, Franklyn George McManus, basso cantante, whose splendid singing still continues to be a delight to a host of radio fans, whose concert work has brought to him a goodly share of fame and whose services are much in demand by those putting on broadcasts of a high musical order.

Mr. McManus began his musical career before the footlights with the Caro. Miller family, appearing with the now famous Marilyn Miller. He has studied with the best teachers and has the reputation of possessing a very excellent reproducing radio voice, which is greatly attributable to his success on the air.

Music lovers throughout New England will be glad to learn that in numerous programs now being prepared for the fall, Mr. McManus will take a prominent part.

Popular

FRANKLYN GEORGE McMANUS, basso cantante, heard frequently on the air from local stations, and whose delightful singing has created for him a large following in the radio audience.

High school graduation day in the future, may become a national event with the President of the United States addressing all of the 500,000 graduates simultaneously by radio.

This suggestion was made by Dr. John H. Finley, New York editor, during a talk over the Columbia system on the Radio Homemakers' hour recently.

"More than 40 young artists, representing the ablest musical talent in Russia today, comprise the New Moscow Radio Opera, heard twice each week over a Russian network of seven high-powered stations."

This information was disclosed in a recent article appearing in a late issue of "What's on the Air," written by one of the magazine's staff correspondents who has just completed a hurried trip across Russia and Siberia.

"Although the entire network and its programs are under the direct control of the Soviet commission of post and telegraphy," the article continues, "nothing political is dispensed through the microphone in direct connection with programs emanating from the Radio Center Opera."

It is the correspondent's opinion that the Moscow Radio Center Opera is the best equipped and most talented of Europe's musical organizations performing before the microphone.

It is interesting to note that instead of dumping the entire catalogue of patriotic music into the program hopper, to be delivered to radio listeners on July 4, the National Broadcasting Co. this year will avoid using an over-supply of tunes generally associated with Independence Day.

While there will be a patriotic coloring to some of the programs, care will be taken not to bore listeners with a constant repetition of music in the same theme. A recent survey of listeners indicated that too much music or continuity on any one holiday soon becomes monotonous.

At the Radio Dial

THE ADMIRAL may not be overjoyed at his frequent speech making, but from all signs, radio audiences are far from being tired of hearing him. Tonight on the Paramount-Publix hour his vitality will be reduced a bit more when he tells of some interesting experiences he encountered when at the South Pole. The hour is 10 o'clock and the station, WNAC. And for those insatiable Byrd fans, there are movies playing in town which show the Byrd expedition at the Antarctic.

"WHEN THE Midnight Choo Choo Leaves for Alabam." That's the name of a song Irving Berlin wrote 17 years ago, and tonight on the 7:30 o'clock Fuller program from WBZA the quartet will sing it. Two other ancients, Berlin's "I Want to Be in Dixie" and Harry Carroll's "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," will also be on the program. "Imagination," the most misplayed song of the age, will be played by the orchestra, and if they play it right, they should be decorated with a waterproof medal.

TONIGHT WEEI takes advantage of an old favorite program, the Black and Gold Room Orchestra, a nightly NBC feature from New York. The program, which goes on at 6:05, will present a varied program from dreamy nocturnes to lively scherzos. The music of six nations, France, Poland, Russia, Hungary, America and Norway, will be played.

THE GREATEST welcome Admiral Byrd has ever received, and Boston was the donor. Not even the most discordant band music, playing, for the most part, inappropriate music at the most ridiculous moments, could quell the ardor of so fine a reception that came over WBZA last night from the Copley-Plaza. The Massachusetts spirit in the gathering showed the severe, cold State in a new light. Governor Allen, Mayor Curley at his best, Gen. Walker, Gen. Edwards, Admiral Nulton, Comdr. Howe, E. C. Johnson and Justice Sanderson extended to the admiral real greetings that minimized his previous receptions. And the admiral, who is fast becoming a master of rhetoric, said, when the speeches had all been made, "I am overwelcomed by this reception; I never had such a reception, and I have no words to express how I feel about it." Byrd rose to the tributes paid him and spoke with eloquence and charm as never before. He presented his comrades, and we were shocked to find that practically all of them were New Englanders. The program lasted over three hours, yet it was too short.

Boston's Police Department Must Hang Its Head in Shame So Long as the Contemptuous Garrett Continues to Defy and Flout Courts

With the flippancy of a popinjay, Oliver B. Garrett announces, a friend asserts, that he will present his precious self to the courts of Massachusetts, from which he is a fugitive from justice, in a few days, or when it suits his convenience.

This assertion of his contempt for the courts of Massachusetts ought to enliven the efforts to get him to justice.

He ought to be taken by the scruff of the neck and the seat of the pants and brought into court for trial. Never should he be permitted to say he came in when he felt like it, that the law was unable to catch him.

The charges of corruption and extortion which exist against the former policeman are a serious incident in the civic life of this city.

Boston's police department has been honeycombed with graft, indifference to public duty and incompetence to perform it. Sinister influences have dominated a great part of its activities.

And the violent liquor squad, which ran down innocent people of Boston, along with the guilty, with the savagery of Russian Cossacks, was found by the governor and by the attorney-general to be the symbol of this crookedness.

Garrett's liquor squad demonstrated the same contemptuous disregard for the reputation of Boston and for the constitutional rights of its people which he now flagrantly exhibits for the courts.

If it were justice to have invaded homes, destroyed property and flaunted the serenity of humble people, it would be nothing more than justice on a return trip to get hold of this fellow and compel him to meet the ciminal charges which have been levelled against him.

Commissioner Hultmn was bequeathed an unsavory mess which he seem to be purifying with firmness and patience. Heshould add to it one part of diligence and prescribthat for his men who have been assigned the duty o locating their erstwhile colleague.

Mr. Hultman is to be comended for the official spanking he administered t the men in his department who were held responble for the escape of a youthful bandit from cit prison a few days ago. The American suggests to Mr. Hultman that he make a few suggestive gestures with the same paddle in the Garrett pursuit. And we respectfully suggest, too, that if the former raider is found there be no compromise, no little nicetiesimed at sparing his feelings. He should be dragged in, not permitted to prance in as a returning hero.

Boston has 2,592 men listed in its police department. The district attorney has plenty of money at his disposal to keep up a relentless hunt, and has asserted he will not be stopped in his pursuit of Garrett. The state police are co-operating. It hardly seems possible that Garrett should long elude this army, if it is properly directed and shows any zeal on its own part.

The trial of Garrett, whether he be found guilty or innocent, could serve to expose the influences which dominated the Boston police department, which reduced it to its low ebb and which must be eliminated from it. The first and most vital move in this to-be-hoped-for expose is the capture of Garrett.

Reorganize Tariff Board

Public Will Support President in Resolve to Get Best Men to Carry Out Flexible Provisions of New Act

Public sentiment will support the resolve of President Hoover to reorganize the United States Tariff Commission without delay.

Such a reorganization is essential if the commission is to prove equal to the tremendous tasks imposed upon it by the flexible provisions of the new act.

Under the old flexible provisions the task of adjusting rates to meet new economic conditions devolved directly upon the President. But he was so restricted in applying the flexible system that it never had a fair trial.

Under the new flexible provisions the responsibility for revising rates is given to a tariff commission composed of an equal number of representatives of both the major political parties.

These new provisions make of the tariff commission a rate-making body employing semi-judicial methods to arrive at its conclusions. After open hearings and searching investigations the commission is required to recommend to the President such changes in rates as it believes the general welfare demands.

The commission can recommend to the President that he increase or decrease duties as much as fifty per cent in an effort to cover the difference in cost of production at home and abroad.

Obviously the President and the people are entitled to the services of the ablest tariff commission that the country can produce. Its power under the new tariff act will be great. Its responsibilities will be heavy. Its personnel should be carefully selected. Neither partisan nor personal politics should influence the selection.

> "There is a growing and widespread realization," as President Hoover has said, "that in this highly complicated and intricately organized and rapidly shifting modern economic world, the time has come when a more scientific and businesslike method of tariff revision must be devised."

Toward this modernizing of tariff-making the flexible system set up by the new tariff act is a step. Whether it will prove to be a long step will depend upon the competence of the Tariff Commission to which the initial responsibility of adjusting rates is given.

If President Hoover can turn over the administration of the flexible tariff system to an expert commission that commands the confidence of the country, that system may well prove to be the life-saver it was designed to be.

H. G. Wells Writes

ON "THE SCIENCE OF LIFE"

LIKE THE cell theory or the atomic theory Mendelism has shown us that what we were used to think of as single indivisible wholes are in reality composed of discrete and definite units, and that the properties of the whole—in this case, the hereditary constitutions of animals and plants — result directly from the particular combination of their component units.

H. G. Wells

According to the atomic theory, the atom-units of matter persist unchanged through all the strange material transformations which occur in Nature or in the chemist's laboratory; when a candle burns, its matter is not destroyed, but the special arrangements of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen of which it consists are taken to pieces and, after combining with atoms of oxygen from the air, are liberated in the form of new atom-arrangements which we call water-vapor, carbon dioxide, and so forth.

According to the Mendelian theory, the germ-plasm of animals or plants consists similarly of units. These units (apart from the "mutations" of which we have already made mention in our account of Johannsen's work) persist indefinitely without traceable change.

When, as we may actually do, we cross a black mouse and an albino, and obtain a progeny consisting of gray creatures exactly like wild mice, the units in the constitution which determine black hair and albinism have neither been lost, nor merged together (like drops of black and white paint) to form gray, but remain as distinct as the atoms in a molecule, and each is able to emerge unchanged and to produce its original effect in later generations.

Since the re-discovery of Mendel's work in 1900, the greatest further discovery has been that these units of his have a visible habitation—within the chromosomes; and that there they seem to be arranged in a definite and orderly way.

Thirty years ago we knew literally nothing of the solid facts of heredity. Today there are organisms, like the fruit fly Drosophila, which have been so thoroughly and industriously investigated, that the geneticist can take his friends to the microscope, show them this fly's chromosomes—so small as only to show clearly under the highest power—and make such apparently incredible assertions as this:

"You see that rod-shaped chromosome?

"That is the chromosome which determines whether the fly shall be male or female. Close to one end of it, where you see the spindle fibre attached, is situated the hereditary unit which may turn our fly's body yellow instead of gray.

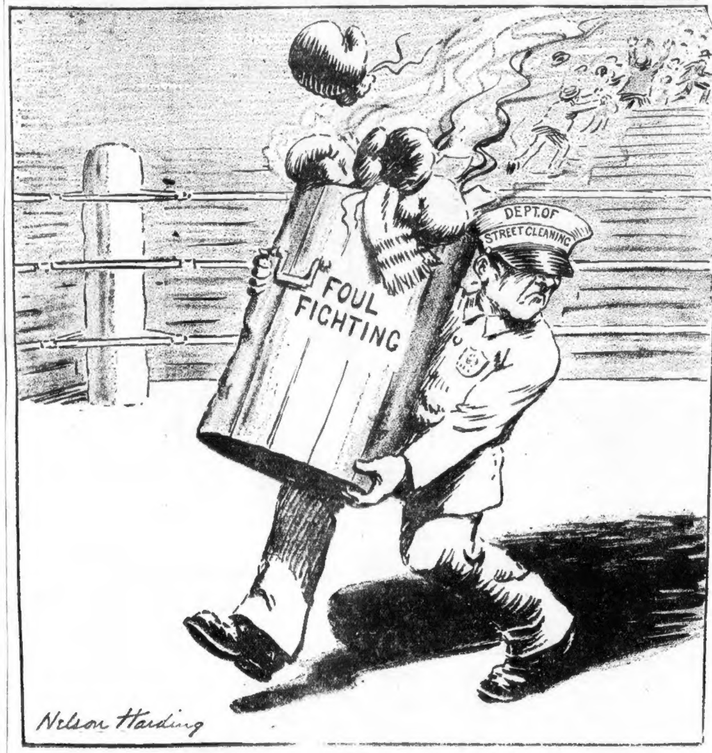
MORE WORK FOR WHITE WINGS -:- By NELSON HARDING



We hate to put another load
Upon the weary White Wings,
But here's a job that's in their line:
It's cleaning up the fight rings.

All trash and refuse are removed
By diligent street cleaners,
Excepting that which now collects
Within our roped arenas.

In Other Words

By NELSON HARDING

Fitzsimmons Revised

THE BIGGER they come the harder they foul.

In the heavyweight boxing world any day is April Foul's day.

Apparently it's possible to foul all of the heavyweights all the time.

"Writhing on the canvas" has become so common that we suggest the next fallen athlete employ a ghost writher, who can do his writhing much better. Then the discomfited boxer can sign in his own handwriting.

And we further submit that this "writhing in the resin" is not picturesque from the spectators' point of view. Why not have the ring sodded down into a well-kept lawn? Groveling on the green would present a more artistic effect.

And the customers then would think it was the conclusion of one of those "interpretative" dances.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

A Prayer

Elsie Robinson

THE WAY is hard—and I am torn by doubt,
Confused by theories, dulled by the long grind
Of work and worry, loneliness and grief,
God, can You hear above this dust and din?
They say You once were man and knew man's pain—
Can you remember that f r agony,
And, out of pity, grant this prayer to me?

Give me a quiet spot within my soul—
Like a green refuge in the forest's heart,
Walled round with silence, dim and sweet and cool—
Where I can hide myself, sometimes, away
From all the heat and clamor of my life.
A quiet spot, where memories may come
As dappled deer come down the forest aisles,
Drifting like shadows through the sun-shot gloom.
So may my memories pass, without a pang,
Leaving me quickened by their loveliness.
Then, as a weary traveler slips within
The still, green crystal of some forest pool,
So may I slip within a pool of peace
And cleanse myself of all the dust of strife
And hate and greed and prickling conceit,
And then lie still—forgetful for a while
Of my sick Self, and all its noisy doubt.
So, dreaming, may I slowly come to feel
Your friendly Presence, brooding all about—
And catch some shining glimpse of Your great plan,
And, for an instant, feel my hand in Yours.
Because You were a man and knew man's pain,
Because You were a man and knew man's fear,
And all man's tire and loneliness and grief,
Give me this secret spot, where I may rest,
Then, having rested, help me go once more
To face the challenge of this thing called life,
And make as good a showing as I may,
In those hard tasks You've given me to do.
This is my prayer. Grant it, I pray, O God,
For once, they tell me You were tired, too.

McIntyre Abroad

By O. O. McINTYRE

LE HAVRE, June 28—The Normandy coast as usual was misty with a thin drizzle when the boys and girls ended the six-day buggy ride and began to disembark. Le Havre, despite a heavy mistral, at 6 a. m. was bustling. It is a seaport and "a big ship was in." Custom inspection is casual. Women with mustaches do most of it.

Under the great landing shed the dinky continental train with its peanut stand whistle was waiting. Tourists have heard much of the brigandage of porters at Havre and Cherbourg. A single porter carried all our hand luggage from the ship to the train compartment and bestowed a gracious "Merci, monsieur!"

His tip was 15 francs—or 60 cents. Four porters carried the same luggage from the curb to the ship edge—a shorter distance—in New York and at a cost of $2, and if one of them stopped long enough to bestow a hasty thank-you it entirely escaped me. And I'm a hound for such details.

My method of packing is somewhat like Noel Coward's. I stuff all my belongings in a suit case and then clip off the edges. I left on the steamer one pocket lighter, a bright yellow steamer cap, a left Russian red house boot and a bottle of sodiphene minus a couple of gargles.

The boat train starts with a quick lurch when a rheumatic old man pops out of nowhere and runs up and down along the track ringing a hand bell. Those not aboard when he makes his sudden appearance are left behind. We whirled by three amazed passengers sampling bottled beer from a portable cart.

An ancient philosopher has observed that the prosperity of a country can be estimated by its new roofs. Judging from that standard, France is on the up and up. Havre and the surrounding countryside fairly glistened with freshly placed roof tops. A good year for roofers, anyway. 'And mimosa is in bloom.

The conductor with winey red cheeks and a sour winey breath seemed pleased the dog occupied one of the seats. There was a charge of $1 which he collected and which—crass sceptic that I am—I do not believe will ever find its way to the coffers of the chemin de fer etat. But conductors must live. Or think they must.

In our compartment was a bright blonde whose fingernails were lacquered an ebony black. Her gown, too, was black, as was her cloche hat. I almost expected to see her teeth beetled to complete the picture. She spoke to the conductor in a rapid foreign tongue and lit a black-tipped cigarette. Henry S-ll suggested she might be a crepe hanger by occupation.

It is interesting to watch a group of passengers glare at each other when they take their places in the compartment of a continental train. Invariably they seem ready to fly at each other's throats. But after they ride awhile they find they want to play pat-a-cake and not kill each other at all. Some of the greatest and most enduring friendships of travelers have begun in these haphazard meetings.

One of my best friends in France is a perfumer who quarreled with me seven years ago over room in the overhead baggage space of a boat train. We were both wrong, admitted it, snapped into a waltz and every time I come to Europe we exchange Alphonse and Gaston calls.

Harry Thaw, with the aid of his body guard who said he was an ex-newspaperman and ex-playwright, introduced himself while waiting in the Havre custom line. He talked rationally enough, recalling some reference of mine to him in these columns many years ago. Yet he still has a wild and started look. Thaw has the most magnificently shaped head I ever saw. The mouth and eyes are the give-away.

• • •

All through the Normandy fields are glaring signs: 'Visit Egypt!" The unseasonable weather of the Riviera has killed its popularity, at least temporarily. Monte Carlo has had the worst season in history as have other resorts on the Southern coast. On the other hand, winter sports at St. Moritz and in the Swiss Alps are attaining an amazing social following.

The train moves by fits and starts through the acres of chimney pots that are the outskirts of Paris. From the window one sees familiar signs: "Vin et liquers, Bois et Charbon, Defense d'afficher, Epicerie, Brasserie." A priest with pancake hat and flying skirts pedals along on a safety bicycle. An American leans out the train window despite the sign:

"Il est dangereaux, etc.," and shouts: "So this is it?" It is—Paree, Paree!
